Willkie Lays Decline of Democracies To Roosevelt

Butte, Mont., Sept. 24.—Wendell Willkie tonight charged that President Roosevelt had contributed to the "economic decline of European democracies" by declaring in 1937 that commodity prices were too high.

Here in the Nation's copper capital, where assaults on world prices of that metal have been keenly felt, the Republican Presidential nominee told a crowd of 26,000:

"You will recall that in the spring of 1937 we had a marked business pickup and there are great hope throughout the world that the depression was at an end.

"Contributed to Rise of Hitler"

"In April, 1937, when the pickup was coming, the President made a public announcement that the price of commodities was too high. The effect was very disastrous throughout the world in my judgment. It was a factor in the decline of the democracies of Europe and thus contributed to the rise of Hitler.

"Copper was selling at 17 cents a pound. It began to fall immediately afterward. I am informed that this resulted in a reduction in the wages of every man who works

Sloan Fears New Depression Unless Willkie Is Elected

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 24.—Warning that the armament program will not bring permanent prosperity, Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of General Motors Corporation, today expressed hope that Wendell Willkie will be President when the time comes to liquidate the defense undertaking.

Then, he said, "you will have coming into the economy more confidence in private enterprise."

"The defense program will be a minus when liquidated," he added, "Willkie will be a plus which will offset the minus to a great extent.

"If Mr. Roosevelt is elected there will be a minus and you will have two minuses—and a lack of confidence."

The Gallup Poll

'Independent' Gains Shown For Willkie

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 24.—Wendell Willkie's most striking gains as compared with 1936 Republican strength have been made among the so-called "independent" voters, a group overwhelmingly for President Roosevelt in the last Presidential election.

That fact stands out today at the conclusion of a Nation-wide fact-finding survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

Political leaders have long held a healthy respect for the "independent" vote, but not too much has been known heretofore about its size or voting habits. The Institute's survey makes three major points clear in the current campaign:

1. One voter in every five (20 per cent) regards himself as an independent — without definite party allegiance. Easterners and Westerners, farmers and city people, these voters will hold the balance of power in November, since neither the Republicans nor the Democrats have enough "regular" party members to carry the election unaided.

2. Whereas the independents reached in the Institute survey were 76 per cent for President Roosevelt in the election of 1936, only 51 per cent with definite opinions at this stage of the race say they will vote for Roosevelt again. Mr. Willkie, with 49 per cent of the independent vote today, is 25 percentage points stronger with these voters than was Gov. Landon.

3. Furthermore, a substantial number of independents (18 per cent) say they have not yet decided how they will vote.

Today, in six key Northern and Western States, accounting for 153 electoral votes, independent voters with opinions divide as follows:

Independents	Roosevelt	Willkie
New York	49%	51%
Pennsylvania	62	38
Ohio	52	48
Illinois	46	54
Michigan	53	47
California	52	48

French Cancel Indo-China Pact; Tokyo's Forces Renew Assault

By the United Press

Hanoi, Indo-China, Sept. 24. The Japanese Canton army late today resumed heavy attacks across the Kwangsi frontier on French and Indo-Chinese forces which resisted stoutly from fortified positions.

In the first few hours of the renewed attacks, said to be the most intense since the Japanese crossed the border Sunday night, 200 Japanese prisoners were reported taken.

[A French Broadcast from Saigon at 10 p. m. E. S. T. said the situation was "outwardly calm following a minor exchange of rifle and machine-gun fire Tuesday afternoon," but that Indo-China was continuing preparations to resist any Japanese action, the Associated Press reported.]

Air Alarms in Hanoi

French authorities, although still hopeful of a peaceful settlement, indicated that the agreement signed here on Sunday afternoon with the Japanese was canceled because it was unworkable. The agreement provided for Japanese occupation of three airdromes by a limited number of Japanese troops (said in France to be 6,000). It did not sanction entry of the powerful Canton army into Indo-China.

A Japanese invasion fleet comprising eight troop transports, a cruiser and three destroyers was reported en route to Haiphong, the country's principal port. The commander reportedly had been asked, however, by Maj. Gen. Issaku Nishihara to defer an attempt to land by force at Haiphong. Nishihara was en route to Hainan Island aboard a minesweeper, reportedly to attempt to persuade Gen. Ando, commanding the Japanese army in the South China area, to hold up his attack across the frontier.

Japanese Notify of Attack

The French, who were reported to have captured Dongdang on the frontier, which they were forced to abandon to superior forces early Monday, were said to be fighting determinedly there and at Langson, important railroad town 82 miles northeast of here. Heavy French shelling from concrete fortifications was said to be taking a heavy toll of advancing Japanese.

[A Domei (Japanese) news agency dispatch said the Japanese had captured 240 men of the Indo-Chi-

British Lift Brows At French Report Of Nazi Disaster

London, Sept. 24 (AP).—Informed British military sources refused to comment today on dispatches from the French-Spanish border, published here, that Germany lost "between 50,000 and 60,000 picked troops" in a disaster of September 16 when a Channel gale scattered Adolf Hitler's "invasion fleet."

The assertions were made in the Daily Mail by Harold Cardozo, a special correspondent on the French-Spanish border.

Neutral military sources also were inclined to discount the report.

Shanghai Sept. 24.—Attempting an almost unbelievable stroke of international blackmail, Adolf Hitler seems to be upon the verge of successfully forcing Japan into an unwilling but full-fledged alliance with the Reich.

Adopting frank "or else" tactics, Hitler is demanding, through Max Stahmer, a personal emissary, that Japan immediately enter into full-fledged participation in warfare against Britain, under an iron-bound politico-economic alliance among the Axis powers.

[A United Press Shanghai dispatch said reports from Tokyo were that Stahmer had negotiated a provisional pact in which Germany and Japan agreed in principle on a defense alliance to become effective in event of Anglo-American collaboration, such as the suggested joint use of Britain's Singapore naval base.

[The New York Herald Tribune reported also that the Japanese Ambassador in Rome talked Tuesday with Foreign Minister Ciano in what appeared to be an extension of the recent Ribbentrop-Mussolini conferences.]

The German pressure, it is understood, includes hints of possible Soviet anti-Japanese action as well as a direct threat that if Japan does not join the Reich, Hitler will offer Britain an armistice under conditions leaving the British Empire practically intact except for former German colonies, but with Germany taking over the colonial empires of the Netherlands and Belgium, Italy being satisfied with the major portions of the French colonies.

Such a sensational development,

Roosevelt To Talk Today At New Airport

President Will Lay Terminal Building's Cornerstone at 3:30

President Roosevelt at 3:30 p. m. today will lay the cornerstone of the Terminal Building at the Washington National Airport, designed as a model for American commercial aviation.

All spectators must be in the airport grandstand by 3 p. m., when ground traffic on the field will be stopped and all civil flying halted in the Washington area.

Mr. Roosevelt is expected to arrive at the terminal at 3:13 p. m. He will drive to a stand 500 feet in front of the Terminal Building to signal the first landings on the new field. A fleet of seven transport ships will be followed down the runways by planes representing the Army, Navy and Coast Guard.

The President will make a brief address before laying the cornerstone at a small grandstand behind the Terminal Building. Seats in this stand are reserved for Government officials, members of Congress and aviation and civic representatives. The ceremonies are to be broadcast over the three National radio networks.

No cards are required for admission to the general airport area. The public can enter from the Mount Vernon boulevard at the point where it has been diverted from its previous route and follow the old line to the high ground along the field and most of the area immediately behind the Terminal Building. The ceremonies will be clearly visible from these points, according to Civil Aeronautics officials.

Runways at the $13,000,000 field are now 90 per cent completed. Commercial use of the terminal will begin in December.

Heavy Bombs Blast London In Worst Raid

Gigantic Missiles Said To Be Shattering Center of Metropolis

By the Associated Press

London (Wednesday), Sept. 25.—German bombers concentrated on central London last night and early today in a prolonged raid lit to bright whiteness by calcium flares they dropped before letting go each rack of bombs.

The raid was perhaps the most severe London has undergone. Heavy Nazi bombers struck again and again through a curtain of anti-aircraft fire that earlier had kept many of the raiders back from the central city section.

Incendiary bombs came down on the heart of London along with the big explosives.

The mid-London offices of an American firm were struck by a bomb during the intensive raid. A fire started in one wing was brought

Finns to Let Nazi Troops, Goods Pass To Arctic Ports

Helsinki (Wednesday), Sept. 25 (INS).—An agreement between Finland and Germany by which the Reich is given access to northern Finnish railway lines leading to Norwegian ports was reported in Helsinki early today.

An official Finnish announcement said that transportation of German troops and supplies through northern Finland to Norwegian ports is permitted.

Helsinki diplomatic circles saw in the agreement the first step toward establishment of a thoroughly protected land route from the ice-free Arctic ports southward to Germany. Such a route would greatly extend the British task of bottling up all possible ports which might be used by German shipping.

These circles also pointed out that use of the new Finnish route would spare Germany reported heavy losses in troops and transports at the hands of British submarines in the Skaggerak and Kattegat while en route from Denmark to Norwegian coastal points.

The new agreement apparently was arranged with the blessing of the Soviet Union, which has maintained a dominant interest in Finnish affairs since termination of the Russo-Finnish war.

Procope Not Aware

Hjalmar J. Procope, Finnish Minister, said last night that the Legation had received no official word of the German troop transit agreement. He added, however, that the "arrangement does . . . not imply in any way a giving up of the policy of neutrality . . ."

Blow to Quota System

Senate Rejects Plan Adverse To D. C. Seekers of U. S. Jobs

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

The Senate yesterday finally rejected a proposal which would have the effect of barring residents of the District and environs from appointment in the near future to posts that may be brought into the civil service through the pending Ramspeck bill.

Defeat of the amendment which was offered by Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, came only when the Senate agreed to reconsider after first accepting it.

The proposal, known as the Keller-Nichols amendment, had been approved by the House, but subjected to vigorous opposition of the Civil Service Commission. It would prevent appointment, to any of the more than 150,000 posts covered by the Ramspeck bill, of residents of any State that has exceeded its quota of appointments until the quota of every State has been filled.

The District's civil service quota is 205, Senator Ellender pointed out, while on February 29, 1940, 8,873 District residents had civil service posts.

Maryland has a quota of 687, with 2,093 employes, while Virginia's quota is 1,020, with 2,062 employes. Louisiana, on the other hand, has only 422 civil service positions occupied out of a quota of 885.

On the same vote that knocked out the Keller-Nichols amendment, the Senate approved a proposal that

French Channel Coast in Flames, 4 Nazi Vessels Sunk in One Raid

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 24.—Britain's counter-offensive against invasion swung today in a widening arc of destruction symbolized by a spectacular success in the English Channel—the apparent sinking of four armed German vessels by a single flight of British bombers—and heavy attacks on the Nazi occupied naval base at Brest, France.

On into the night the Royal Air Force carried its almost continuous hammering of Nazi invasion bases, hurling new violent assaults at the ports opposite its invasion-menaced shores. Late tonight Channel coast observers reported "countless" flashes were rising from exploding bombs and heavy Nazi antiaircraft fire.

The Royal Air Force also gave Berlin its attention, hammering utilities and factories for the second successive night.

Berlin Calls Damage Slight

[Berlin's third night raid, late Tuesday and early Wednesday, Berlin dispatches said, caused "several" civilian casualties, as compared to 11 killed and 14 hurt in Monday night's attack. German authorities, contradicting British reports, insisted only slight damage was caused, all to nonmilitary objectives. Tuesday night's raid of a little less than three hours was, according to neutral observers, less severe than Monday night's attack of nearly four hours.]

Reports from Dover tonight said the Straits were shrouded in dense mist. The sea was calm under a cloudless, star-lit sky. There was a slight northwesterly wind.

Mine Sweepers Hit

The R. A. F.'s blow was struck in sight of an Associated Press representative on the English shore, while the German ships moved over the quiet seas toward Boulogne, and it appeared to him that all had been sunk.

The air ministry, identifying the vessels as mine sweepers, said merely that two were known to have been hit and a third damaged.

Five Blenheim bombers, flying in single file, appeared suddenly and went into a dive from 5,000 feet. They loosed a salvo of bombs and columns of water rose as high as the English cliffs.

When the smoke and spray had cleared, only a single German ship could be seen. The Blenheims wheeled and attacked again and when the haze had lifted once more that ship, too, was gone from sight.

Dornier Shot Down

A German Dornier seaplane appeared and was shot down immediately, but a squadron of 15 German Messerschmitt bomber-fighters escorting the vessels disappeared before the British attack.

A cluster of Nazi E-boats—torpedo-carrying motor speedboats—darted out of Boulogne, but turned immediately and raced back to harbor.

[The United Press said its Folkstone correspondent reported the British sank five Nazi torpedo boats.]

Rock Is Shaken

By the Associated Press

Gibraltar, (Wednesday), Sept. 25.—War planes of France, Britain's Nazi-subjugated ally, heavily bombed Gibraltar for four hours and five minutes Tuesday, inflicting death, injuries, property damage and fires.

One hundred or more bombs were hurled by 20 or more planes in the longest and heaviest air raid ever experienced by "The Rock," often raided by Italian bombers.

(Laborers returning to the Spanish town of La Linea, just across a neutral strip and moat from the fortress, said the French bombers sank a British destroyer, hit a submarine and wrought other heavy military damage and death. They said Gibraltar had two more air raid alarms during the evening but no planes were seen.)

Appear to Be U. S Planes

Gibraltar military authorities described the raiders merely as "of French types."

Observers, however, said the planes definitely were French, and Miss Helen Hiett, of the National Broadcasting Co., reported they appeared to be American-made Martin bombers.

The assault apparently was in reprisal for the British-supported attack by "free" French naval forces on Dakar, capital of French West Africa.

The British military report said that so far four persons had been killed and 12 injured by the French raiders, at least one of which was shot down by concentrated gunfire from shore batteries and warships in the harbor.

Damage Described

The Spanish workmen reaching La Linea said in addition to damage to ships, the bombs wrecked a dry dock, set ammunition dumps and food stores afire, badly damaged the "Rock" Hotel, hit the engineers' barracks, ripped up walls on the street, sank two barges, and destroyed an antiaircraft battery and

Shells Speak Again

By the Associated Press

Vichy, France, Sept. 24.—The French government announced tonight that the British naval forces supporting the so-called "Free French" attack on African Senegal, had opened a new and prolonged bombardment of the town of Dakar after failing in six troop-landing attempts.

Casualties reported from Dakar ran as high as 300.

Dakar was still holding out late tonight, while fog hampered British aerial activity, the French said.

A second ultimatum, rejected like the first by Pierre Boisson, French governor general, was declared officially to have demanded the surrender of the capital of French West Africa under pain of destruction of Dakar's fortifications and occupation of the town by force.

A naval communique said the ultimatum was signed by "the admiral commanding the English fleet."

British Try to Land

(In London, the headquarters of Gen Charles de Gaulle, commanding the "Free French" invading forces, said British naval units were along merely to provide "supplementary protection against any attack carried out with German participation." The statement said de Gaulle decided on the expedition because German and Italian officers had seized control of the Dakar air base, which is only 1,900 miles from South America.)

All day Monday and late into the night a naval battle had raged off Dakar, while the attackers made attempt after attempt to land under the cover of shellfire.

A communique said the French submarine Persee was sunk while attacking a British cruiser; that the cruiser herself suffered a direct hit from the Persee, and that three British planes had been shot down.

Bombardment Still Under Way

The second ultimatum, timed to expire at 6 a. m. today, came at 1:30 Tuesday morning, after the invaders had tried four times to land troops at Rufisque Beach, 20 miles northeast of Dakar, and had tried twice to put men ashore further to the northeast. All were repulsed, the government said.

Early this morning the British began dropping shells on the important French naval base, which the government calls "the key to the South Atlantic." Late today the bombardment still was going on, meager wireless reports related.

(The German radio said the attackers of Dakar numbered 7,000

If Congress Remains

Action on D. C. Income Tax Law Change Sought This Fall

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

Congressional action on proposed amendments to strengthen the District income tax law will be sought by Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, father of the revenue act, if Congress remains in session this fall, he said yesterday after the Commissioners had indorsed his bill.

The District Commissioners, in a report held up almost four months by the Budget Bureau, recommended to the House District Committee that the basis of the levy be changed from one of domicile to actual residence.

The alteration, they indicated, would clarify the confusion that now exists over what constitutes a legal domicile. Records of the Internal Revenue Bureau, the report stated, show that 18,000 persons residing in the District and having taxable incomes failed to file returns on the local levy.

Dirksen said it was unfortunate that the report had been delayed until after the District Committee had concluded its labors, but he added that if Congress settles down to work after an expected over-election recess, he will ask that the committee be recalled to consider his bill.

The budget bureau offered no explanation for holding up the Com-landing troops in six troopships, escorted by British cruisers and other naval units, and that "several thousand" British marines also were available for the invasion.)

British Ships Overwhelming

Government circles declared France has ample forces to cope with British landing forces but that British naval superiority is overwhelming.

The British, it was added, have two battleships, four cruisers, six destroyers, six troopships; the French have the crippled battleship Richelieu—knocked out by another British attack off Dakar some months ago—the 10,000-ton cruiser Georges Leygues and three destroyers.

[Earlier, the French said three cruisers were at Dakar. This discrepancy in the latest report was not explained.]

Admirals Landreau and Lacroix, commanders of the French squadron at Port Dakar, wired the Vichy government that they were confident of being able to withstand the British assault; that in any case they will "fight to the end."

Loyal to Petain

Admiral Darlan, the naval minister charged with the task of coordinating France's remaining warships, men and planes, announced that the Senegalese forces loyal to Petain had repulsed landing parties and damaged "aggressor warships."

In an order of the day, he scornfully denied British assertions that the Germans or anyone else had menaced Senegal; declared the British, in attacking, were "only following their own personal interest" and proclaimed:

"Our firmness will stop them."

(British accounts of the action, as relayed from Gen. Charles de Gaulle, leader of the expeditionary force, differed from the Vichy reports. A De Gaulle communique said that his "free" French soldiers and sailors were called to Dakar by French sympathizers, that an unarmed party of emissaries under the white flag of truce was fired upon, two of them being wounded; that French shore batteries opened fire on four "free" French sloops escorting the De Gaulle troopships and that De Gaulle, "not wanting to be a party to a fight between Frenchmen," then withdrew "to a distance."

"Operations in Progress"

(Later British advices, however, said "operations at Dakar are now in progress," presumably by a British naval force of undisclosed size which is supporting De Gaulle. The British Press Association said De Gaulle's own force was of "important" strength, consisting of trained Frenchmen reorganized in England.)

French news agency advices from Dakar said that more than 100 French dead had resulted from the shelling of Dakar Monday, that a French submarine, several houses and a native hospital had been hit by British shells and that a French coastal battery had scored a hit on a British cruiser.

(The German radio said, however, that 250 were killed in Dakar and 60 at sea, and that the Dakar radio station had been put out of action by shells.)

Shelling Called Haphazard

The shelling lasted eight hours, it was reported. Havas, the French news agency, described it as "haphazard."

About 200 men attempted the landing at Rufisque Beach, French advices said, and they were driven off by machine-gun fire and forced back to their troopship.

It was believed the attackers were trying to land enough troops to surround Dakar by land, cut it off from the interior, and then wrest the entire 78,000-square mile colony from the Petain regime.

Petain Regime Orders Purge

Vichy, France, Sept. 24 (U.P.).—Alleging that Gen. Charles De Gaulle's underground "Free French" movement is spreading throughout France, including Nazi-held Paris, the Petain government tonight ordered a far-reaching purge of his followers.

The cabinet ordered the creation of a special court-martial to deal with "traitors" who aligned themselves with the refugee general, himself under sentence of death here on treason charges.

The court-martial, it was said, will judge the guilt of the "Free Frenchmen" participating with De Gaulle and British forces in the naval attack on Dakar.

Firing Squad Ready

The court-martial was created at the request of Minister of Justice Raphael Alibert, De Gaulle's underground opposition to the Petain regime, it was said, has "ramifications throughout France," even among members of the army and official functionaries.

"All traitors judged by the new court-martial and found guilty will be sent to the firing squad immediately," an official spokesman said.

"The court-martial will act swiftly, and anyone sent before it either will be liberated, jailed or sent before a firing squad within 48 hours. Those sentenced to death will have no appeal."

The new court will judge only persons sent before it by the government, such as followers of Gen. de Gaulle, who was said by the ministry of justice tonight to have been "paid by a foreign government to try to steal our colonies."

Peninsula, was declared by the air ministry to have set off four fires visible from 30 miles away.

French Coast in Flames

A "long line of bombs" was loosed over the Brest torpedo boat station, oil tanks and stores, the ministry added, while other planes bombed Zeebrugge, Belgium, and threw sticks—or series—of explosives across the canal mouth, setting off great flashes.

These brief, violent engagements were the high-spots of a long series of assaults by British bombers begun last night and carried on today.

Berlin was transformed into "a Chinese garden party" by hundreds of flares and the fires set in Monday night's raid, British pilots reported tonight.

Stations, Utilities Hit

The fierce attacks, lasting several hours, were delivered at 4½-minute intervals, they said, with railroad stations and utilities receiving the brunt of the bombs.

Here are the targets and the damage done to them, according to an exultant British "box score" issued by the air ministry:

Railway yards near the Potsdamer and Lehrte railway stations: Several fires followed by eight or nine explosions.

The West Electric, Moabit and Klingenberg power stations: Fires which spread rapidly in the time the planes were above the targets; altogether seven big fires which touched off explosive material that blew up in a series of vivid flashes.

Other pilots said they saw bombs going through the white buildings of the Potsdamer station.

The air ministry reported also that British bombers attacked the lock gates of the Kiel Canal; railroad communications over a wide area of the Reich; airplane factories, airdromes, shipyards and docks at Hamburg, Cuxhaven, Bremenhaven, Bremen and Wismar.

A statistical review made public today reported that Royal Air Force bombers had pounded at the docks in German-held Channel ports 48 times in a single week.

Canals, Locks Damaged

Pilots reported "terrific damage not only to docks but to canals and locks as well and violent explosions and fires from Cherbourg to Hamburg" in attacks delivered during the week of September 15-21.

This assault, it was added, laid a rough carpet of high explosive and incediary bombs from Saint Malo, France, to Rotterdam, and encompassed 31 attacks on barge concentrations during which it was believed ammunition carriers had been hit.

In 48 attacks on shipping during the period, the review said, at least five German supply ships were sunk and direct hits were scored on a German cruiser and destroyer.

The "counter battery fire" of Britain's artillery of the air was directed at German gun emplacements on the French coast six times, the review added, and Nazi searchlight concentrations were struck seven times.

British bombers were declared to have penetrated the German front line of invasion to attack railway systems and trains in Germany, Belgium and occupied France 39 times. German attacks on British airdromes were answered with eight attacks on airdromes in Holland and five attacks on airports in Germany.

Hanoi had its third air alarm Tuesday afternoon. Posters were plastered all over the city urging everyone without urgent business in the capital to leave. Schools were closed.

Twelve Japanese bombers flew over Haiphong early Tuesday, but dropped no bombs. French ground batteries withheld fire.

The Japanese, however, notified the French that they would launch a major attack on the coastal region at dawn, which would include the bombing of Haiphong, port of Hanoi.

French Annamite (native) troops were reported standing up well against the Japanese in the frontier fighting. The Japanese have not yet come up against the main French white forces, stationed between Langson and Hanoi.

Japanese bombers attacked Langson repeatedly, which also was under artillery fire. At least two Japanese planes were reported shot down.

Shortly afterward, the observers in Spain reported, a British cruiser, four destroyers and two submarines left the harbor and headed into the Atlantic toward French Morocco or French West Africa, probably with retaliatory intent.

Late this afternoon reports from Tangier, internationalized zone, Morocco, said heavy cannonading could be heard from an undetermined source.

(The French government at Vichy said it had launched reprisals for the attack on Dakar. Unofficial reports were that 120 planes raided Gibraltar.)

The attacking planes, which from the direction of their arrival and departure were based in French Morocco, evidently did their best to limit destruction to military objectives.

Hitler's agent told Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka, would release the British navy for joint action with the American Navy against Japan's position in East Asia, upon which Germany would additionally profit by taking over portions of Japan's gains of the last three years.

Obviously, the German motive is to force Japan to attempt the immediate capture of Hongkong and Singapore and then an assault on Australia and New Zealnad, which probably inevitably would involve the United States in the war against Japan, thereby automatically blocking any further American naval, airplane or munitions deals helpful to Britain.

Confronted by this hard-boiled attitude, Japan, according to reports from behind the scenes of Tokyo governmental circles, is rapidly, albeit reluctantly, drifting into the arms of the Reich, despite realization that the present trend will lead at least to an acutely dangerous tension with the United States, possibly culminating in war.

Four Aspects Favor Japan

Weighing the Nazi proposals, Japan is confronted by four favoring considerations:

First, keeping the British fleet in the Atlantic with Germany continuing the assault upon England, preventing any possibility of a combination of the American and British fleets against Japan.

Second, certainty of acquiescence of Indo-China to all Japanese demands, increasing Japan's chances of a knock-out blow against Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Third, acquisition, as an ally of all the German armaments patents.

Fourth, the chance to grab Singapore, the Malaya, and the Netherlands East Indies without precipitating war with the United States, for Tokyo is convinced Washington will hesitate against Japanese hostilities so long as England needs the major portion of the output of American factories and so long as there is any danger of a British collapse giving the Nazis an opportunity to menace the American Atlantic coasts, particularly South America, before the new bases secured from England are completed.

Picture Has Another Side

On the other hand, Japan views three strong arguments against yielding to Hitler's pressure:

First, without doubt an immediate stoppage of all imports from America of gasoline, scrap iron and other war necessities.

Second, stoppage of silk sales to America, thus further almost fatally reducing foreign exchange credits.

Third, an almost inevitable clash with the United States, whereby Japan's vital sea-borne commerce would certainly be virtually destroyed.

Evidently Hitler is hoping to prod both Japan and Spain into almost simultaneously joining the Axis hoping that such a spread of the war's conflagration would influence certain sections of American opinion in favor of retaining for American defense the entire output of the war plants, instead of continuing aid to England.

Berlin also hopes that such an extension of the conict might force a division of the American Navy between the Pacific and the Atlantic, thus enabling Japan to seize Singapore and to harry commerce in the Indian Ocean, to cut off all shipments of men and supplies from Australia and New Zealand.

Navy Said to Favor Pact

The Japanese Navy, which in 1939 was the greatest stumbling block to a Japan-Reich alliance, is now said to be veering in favor of a pact, believing it would make easier the seizure of the Netherlands East Indies, and believing that America would not dare to fight Japan with Britain facing the possibility of defeat, and possible assault against America across the Atlantic.

It is understood Stahmer's proposals of an economic and political pact envisage Japan's "new order" for East Asia as the counterpart of the Axis-dominated Europe and North Africa. However, Germany reserves large proportions of the tin output of the East Indies and a large portion of the rubber from the Malaya, but gives Japan monopoly rights on all the oil in the East Indies.

(Communications between the London and New York bureaus of the Associated Press were temporarily disrupted, apparently as a result of the bombing. Censorship prevented identification of the bombed American firm but it appeared to have been the Associated Press building, a block from Fleet street, five blocks from St. Paul's Cathedral.)

Antiaircraft guns all the way from the coast to the center of the city were in action, and single German planes made extensive stabs at the southeast coast and at Wales on the west throughout the night.

Sixteen incendiary bombs fell on a hospital in north London. There were no casualties.

Several persons were killed and injured, however, when a bomb struck a building in central London.

Four incendiary bombs, dropped at intervals of several minutes, fell at approximately the same spot in central London.

In the early morning hours the Nazi raids grew in intensity.

Long-burning flares dropped by advance planes guided the bombers to their objectives.

[The entire heart of London was blasted by "super bombs" that demolished large buildings—two by a single tremendous explosion—and caused heavy casualties, the United Press said. Among several historic buildings in the center of the city wrecked by the terrific attack, it said, was a famous church designed by Sir Christopher Wren." Among his churches are St. Paul's, St. Mary-Bow, St. Bride's on Fleet street, and St. James' on Piccadilly.]

It was the Germans' eighteenth consecutive nightly assault, launched after they had beaten all day Tuesday at England in relay attacks with some 400 planes.

Hours after the start of the night's raid on London bombs were dropping all about the city—north, southeast, southwest. A movie theater in a West London district was smashed. In some sections the streets were littered with glass and debris.

During yesterday London had but two brief alarms, most of the invading Nazis having been fought off along the coast. That area—Southampton in particular—appeared t ohave been the heaviest sufferer in the daytime assaults.

Many bombs fell on towns along the Thames Estuary. In one instance a direct hit was made on a small shelter and four members of a family of five were killed.

The air ministry announced that eight German planes had been shot down in daylight engagements against the loss of four British planes—two of whose pilots were saved.

British sources reported from one south coast town that two big German formations had swept repeatedly overhead, smashing a church and many surrounding homes, killing and injuring numbers of civilians. From the debris bodies still were being dragged tonight.

Above another town on the coast 50 Nazi planes rode the air lanes in successive waves, plunging into a howling antiaircraft barrage. From aloft, British Hurricanes and Spitfires fell upon them. The attack was broken up only after the heaviest aerial battle yet seen in that section, in a series of dogfights which spattered the pavements with machinegun bullets.

Twice again the Germans struck in that same area; the defense was repeated and it was reported that not a single bomb was dropped.

The ground fire from strengthened antiaircraft defenses was the heaviest yet heard along the coast.

The two daylight bomber assaults upon London—one under escort of about 100 Nazi fighter planes—were beaten off quickly.

Britain Spends 6 Times Revenue

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 24.—British government expenditures last week were almost six times larger than revenue, treasury returns showed tonight.

Expenditures thus far in the current financial year, from April, now stand at the equivalent of $6,101,204,226.64.

Last week's expenditures were $248,660,321.48, as compared with revenue of $47,626,350.12.

London, Sept. 24 (AP).—Germany and Italy sank 49,200 tons of merchant shipping in the week ending September 16, the admiralty reported today, compared to an average weekly total loss of 54,223 tons. Germany claimed to have sunk 128,350 tons during this period, the admiralty said.

In addition, "some 33,000 tons of former neutral ships" have been sunk, it was added.

Ronald Cross, minister for shipping, said "about one-sixth and more, probably one fifth" of all German merchant shipping has been sunk or captured since the war started and that "a further sixth" is sheltering in neutral ports.

German ships still at sea, he said, are either playing hide-and-seek or are on "coastal sorties."

London, Sept. 24 (U.P.).—Loss of the eighteenth British submarine since the start of the war was revealed tonight when the admiralty announced that the 1,805-ton Thames is long overdue and is "presumed to be lost," with its crew of 60 officers and men.

Barranquilla, Colombia, Sept. 24 (AP).—Three British merchant seamen who reached here yesterday aboard a tanker were part of the crew of an unidentified freighter shelled and sunk by a German sea raider, it was learned today. Presumably the other crewmen were lost, since the survivors said the Germans machine-gunned the lifeboats.

London, Sept. 24 (AP).—The Canadian Squadron of the Royal Air Force destroyed 33 Nazi planes in three recent battles, it was disclosed today. The formal announcement of the conferring of the distinguished service order on their legless English squadron leader, Douglas Bader, who personally bagged six of the 33, was made.

A.P. Building Believed Hit By Nazi Bomb

By the Associated Press

New York (Wednesday) Sept. 25.—Meager advices the London A. P. staff sent through British censorship indicated the Associated Press building there was struck by a German bomb early Wednesday morning during a violent air raid on mid-London.

Staff members were not injured but were forced by seeping water to leave the air raid shelter in the basement of the office on Tudor street, one block from Fleet street. A 47-minute lapse in communication also resulted.

One corner of the building apparently was struck, and a fire started.

Five-Story Building

Water seeping into the basement refuge either resulted from fire-fighting efforts or broken water mains.

The five-story brick building houses both the Associated Press news and photo departments. The Canadian Press bureau also is in the building.

A message received at 8:51 p. m. (E. S. T.), said "operating under extreme difficulty." A subsequent indirect message received here said the London bureau was forced to cease functioning temporarily.

Block Off Fleet Street

The London bureau is one block off Fleet street's "newspaper row," and two short blocks from the Thames embankment. Other newspaper offices and printing shops are in the immediate vicinity. The London Daily Mail's printing plant is only a few yards distant.

Bombs have fallen in the Fleet street area previously, one incendiary striking a water tower atop the London Evening Standard and plunging to the basement.

St. Paul's Cathedral, near which suicide squads recently unearthed unexploded bombs, is about five blocks east of the Associated Press bureau.

Three blocks to the west are the Inns of Court, London legal quarters. Bombs also crashed there recently and in the nearby Strand, which is a continuation of Fleet street from Temple Bar westward.

Nearly all London's big newspapers and offices of foreign correspondents are concentrated in an area within a few blocks of the Associated Press bureau on the north side of the Thames, an area where Dr. Samuel Johnson, Charles Lamb and other writers once lived.

Roosevelt Accepts 'Independents' Aid

Tells Third-Termers They Are Working To Save Democracy

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt told a newly organized "National Committee of Independent Voters" yesterday that its third-term-pledged members are "working very distinctly for the preservation of democracy."

The President accepted proposed campaign aid of the Norris-La Guardia sponsored group. Thomas G. Corcoran, key New Deal adviser, resigned his three Government posts to work with the committee's executive officers for the reelection of Mr. Roosevelt.

Senator Norris, Nebraska Independent, and Fiorello LaGuardia, New York's American Laborite mayor, led the "independent" group to the White House. There President Roosevelt told them he was "very happy to accept the support of every liberal and every progressive in the United States because I think we agree now that we are living in an era, an age, where the principles of democracy itself are at stake."

Cleveland's Son Heard

Meantime at the Capitol a son of Former President Grover Cleveland declared his own and his late father's opposition to a third term and the Senate engaged in a partisan row on Wendell L. Willkie's public power views.

Other Washington political developments:

Congressional intimates of Vice President John Nance Garner heard he is en route back to Washington, heading their advice to preside at the closing Senate sessions if Congress adjourns since die. Garner, opposed to a third term, has been in Uvalde, Tex., since the Democratic convention rejected his bid for the Presidency. A rare procedure for him, he left Mrs. Garner at home.

Senator Carter Glass denied his opposition to a third term meant he is "bolting" the Democratic Party. He reiterated that he will vote for President Roosevelt, feeling unalterably bound "to support the nominee of the convention."

President Roosevelt told newsmen he would like to make a defense inspection trip in the Pittsburgh area and see what was happening in aviation in several areas west of the Alleghenies. But he suggested he might not go as far as Cincinnati, where a new short-wave radio station has invited him to attend an opening broadcast to South America October 12.

Adjournament Tangle Appears

Congress headed into an adjournment tangle, as Senate Majority Leader Barkley told the Senate he was informed by Speaker Rayburn that the House lacks the votes to adjourn sine die. Barkley said that "if that is the attitude of the House, we'll be here until Christmas." Brief recesses or a recess until after the elections have been suggested.

House Democrats prepared for a showdown caucus today on election of a permanent majority leader, with four of the five candidates for the post favoring postponement in the interest of party harmony. But leading in pledged votes was Representative McCormack of Massachusetts, chairman of the caucus, whose backers will demand his election now.

Secretary of Interior Ickes touched off the Senate row when he accused Willkie in a telegram of "covering up your record as a foe of public power" and "posing as a friend of public power in the West and a foe of public power in Wall Street." Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, attacked Willkie as "about-facing" in his pledge to complete the Grand Coulee, Bonneville and Central Valley projects, while Senator Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin, defended Willkie.

Corcoran Quits "Pay Job"

Some 30 members of the executive committee of the new "National Committee of Independent Voters" called on the President shortly after the group had organized in the office of Senator Norris. Norris was elected honorary chairman of the committee and LaGuardia, chairman.

Corcoran earlier resigned as attorney for the RFC, his only "pay job," and as special assistant to the Attorney General and trustee of the Electric Home and Farm Authority.

Corcoran, associated with Ben Cohen, PWA attorney, in drafting legislation for the early New Deal, afterwards a liaison man and intimate consultant of the President, and early identified with the third-term movement, is expected to work at the committee's Washington offices.

Senator Norris led the group into the President's executive office, where the veteran Nebraskan independent told Mr. Roosevelt that "in this crisis the American people have two choices and only two choices for commander in chief. Those choices are Willkie and Roosevelt.

Willkie Called Untried

"Under such circumstances we are choosing between a third term for President Roosevelt, who has the Nation's safety well in hand, and the uncertainty of a first term for an inexperienced, untried candidate," Norris said.

The President replied he was "very, very happy" because "I have known most of you personally as we have been working together with most of you in the past and in working I think we have made good progress for the country."

"I think we all of us have our feet on the ground sufficiently to know that we haven't accomplished for the country as much as we ought, but that a great deal is left to do," the President continued.

He said, "all of us have been bearing the work in the heat of the day" and that "George (Norris) isn't through and I am not through, and some of these youngsters like Fiorella (LaGuardia) are not through. They have got a great many years left to work for what we call by the generic term 'liberalism'—for progressive objectives."

Niles to Assist LaGuardia

Mr. Roosevelt said the principles of democracy today "are being attacked on many quarters and it is going to help democracy to survive if democracy will remain progressive and liberal through the many strange things that are happening."

Elected executive assistant to LaGuardia was David K. Niles, who recently resigned as assistant to the Secretary of Commerce. Besides Corcoran, the list of vice chairmen included such men as Dean James M. Landis of the Harvard Law School, former Gov. John G. Winant of New Hampshire, former oGv. Chase S. Osborne of Michigan and Frank Graham, president of the University of North Carolina.

Meanwhile, before the Senate Judiciary subcommittee Richard F. Cleveland, son of President Cleveland, testified that reelection of the President would "remove our most effective check against the world's present tendency toward concentration of political power."

Cleveland, a Baltimore attorney, said the "central consideration in this issue is power." He said his father, who served two nonconsecutive terms in the White House, turned down all urgings that he run again because he was "unalterably opposed" to a third term.

Lawrence E. Nelson, Utah State Senator, and William Strite McDowell, Detroit attorney, also urged enactment of a constitutional amendment limiting White House tenure.

Senator Burke later cited Cleveland's testimony on the floor of the Senate in retorting to Ickes' attack on Willkie. Burke said the issue is "one of political power not of electric power."

missioners' report from May 14 to August 31, when the director, Harold D. Smith, informed the District heads that the bureau had no objection to the presentation of the report so long as no commitment were made relating it to the President's program. The Commissioners said they had not acted on the matter since August 31 because they were under the impression that the House District Committee had ceased to function for the session.

The Commissioners, in their report, pointed out that the Income Tax Act imposes the levy on individuals "domiciled" in the District on the last day of the taxable year.

Many Pay Tax Anyway

"Because the word 'domiciled' is incapable of exact definition," they said, there is considerable uncertainty regarding individuals subject to the provisions of the act.

"Many individuals who reside in the District, but vote or intend eventually to return to one of the States apparently recognize a duty to contribute to the support of the local government and have filed returns and paid the tax. Other persons, similarly situated, have not filed returns nor paid any tax because of the belief that they are not domiciled in the District."

The Commissioners cited the United States Court of Appeals decision in the Sweeney case, in which a Government employe who had resided in Washington 20 years was held not subject to the intangible personal property tax, since repealed, because he maintained a legal residence in Massachusetts.

Ramspeck Bill Addition Rejected

would allow Congressional clerks who have served four years to transfer to a classified civil service position in the executive branch of the Government. The Civil Service Commission would prescribe whatever tests of fitness it desired.

This amendment, approved by the Senate Civil Service Committee, would give some security to the experienced clerks of members of Congress and of standing committees who might lose their jobs in case their member was defeated at the polls.

"If there is justification for 'blanketing' into permanent civil service positions many thousands of persons, the bulk of whom have had but a few years' experience, there is certainly justification for granting this opportunity to employes of the legislative branch," said the committee in its report.

Pending when the Senate quit for the day was another amendment of Senator Ellender to except from the Ramspeck bill all posts to which appointment is made by the President with consent of the Senate, together with assistant United States attorneys, deputy marshals and deputy collectors of internal revenue—numbering, according to Senator Ellender, "some 10,000 or 15,000 in all."

Fight Brews on Exams

But the real fight today, said Senator Ellender last night, will come on his amendment to require the employes whom the President may cover into the service under the Ramspeck bill to take competitive examinations with a ten-point credit—instead of noncompetitives.

This proposal, said Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, who has been advocating competitive examinations, is "the key amendment" to the bill.

"In my opinion, it's not the key amendment," retorted Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, chief sponsor of the Ramspeck measure, "it's the killing amendment." He was referring to the belief held in many quarters that the bill could not pass both Houses this session if it requires competitive tests.

The Senate discussed the Ramspeck bill and amendments for little over an hour late in the afternoon, following a 51-18 vote bringing the measure formally up for consideration.

$1,407,245 Raised To Fight Paralysis

Net proceeds from the 1940 "Fight Infantile Paralysis" campaign, which was climaxed by the President's Birthday Ball, totaled a new high of $1,407,245.74, President Roosevelt was told yesterday.

The amount exceeded by nearly $80,000 that collected in 1939, according to Keith Morgan, chairman of the committee for the celebration of the President's birthday.

Roosevelt Safest Leader, Wallace Says

Candidate Urges Experienced President Be Kept in Office

By the Associated Press

Kansas City, Sept. 24.—Henry A. Wallace tonight pictured President Roosevelt and the Democratic Party as best fitted by experience to lead the Nation safely past possible postwar economic collapse.

The Democratic Vice Presidential nominee, climaxing a day's tour through Missouri with a speech before a political rally here, urged Americans to retain "a government that knows how to meet the problem of changing over from war prosperity to peace."

"If we come successfully through this present world crisis, if the dictators are defeated and peace comes to the world, there will be a day of reckoning," he said.

". . .we are bound to lose interest in military defense. The strain will be over, the nightmare will have disappeared. For a day, like the great day of November 11, 1918, all will look rosy. . ."

"The post-war collapse, which we all know is likely to follow the coming of peace, will be caused by sudden stoppage of defense work. It will be war prosperity going into reverse."

Asserting there was a way to avoid most of the economic danger of sudden transition from war to peace, Wallace said:

"If the right kind of peace comes . . . it will be sensible to close down a large part of our defense program. But the more fundamental elements of national strength will need serious attention. We shall still need to protect our soil against wind and water . . . We shall still need to develop our program of social security . . . especially for old people . . .

"When peace comes our children are not going to have to work harder to make up for what we have spent on defense. On the contrary, the danger is that they may not have enough work to do. This is the danger that must be understood by our Government if we are to keep out of serious trouble.

"It is a danger that cannot be understood by the average Wall Street operator posing as a business man, if such persons were to be given the leadership of our Government.

"Our present Administration has handled the hard and complicated task of rebuilding a country smashed by the collapse that occurred under Republican management. This rebuilding is not complete, but it is well along.

"We Americans have to consider how best we can assure the continued services of a President and party that have had the experience in foreign affairs to guard us against surprise, and the experience in domestic affairs to take us through rough times without disaster."

Hails Destroyer Deal

Sedalia, Mo., Sept. 24 (AP).—Henry Wallace today hailed the "trade" of United States destroyers for naval bases as "one of the greatest steps that has been taken in the past century."

"I am so delighted," he said, "that President Roosevelt had the vision to undertake this step. It makes it even more certain that none of our boys will have to shed his blood on foreign soil."

in the copper mines of this area.

"The very fact that the President had enough power in his hands that his mere statement could have caused such a rapid decline in the price of copper, I say to you is very deleterious to our domestic economy.

"For instance, if Grover Cleveland had made some such remark, it would not have affected the price of copper, because he did not have enough power to do anything about it. But in the last seven years we have concentrated much power in Washington."

Referring to public land problems in Montana, he said they were administratered from Washington with a Secretary of the Interior "who grew up in Chicago," a slap at Secretary Harold L. Ickes.

Then, in his first statement on a Cabinet appointment if he were elected President, Willkie said he would choose a Secretary of the Interior from the Western country "who grew up in this country and understands your problems."

"Class Division" Attacked

All of today in stops at Spokane, Wash.; Sandpoint, Idaho; Paradise, Mont., and Missoula, Mont., Willkie lambasted President Roosevelt for "dividing America into classes."

Willkie brought gales of laughter when he pointed to the paradox of the scion of Hyde Park posing as a "common man" and implying that he, a Hoosier who came up the "hard way," is an "aristocrat."

After a two-day reprieve from the Roosevelt enthusiasts in Oregon and Washington, Willkie today again became the target of a tomato. It was thrown at him in Missolua but again, as in California, the aim was bad, and struck Glenn Perry, of the New York Sun, on the shoulder.

Willkie, upbraiding Mr. Roosevelt for stirring up class war and calling on the voters to give the New Deal "the gate," said he had read both of the President's recent speeches, the one before the teamsters union and the "few at the top" oration at the University of Pennsylvania.

"Look Me Over"

"Now we have the arguments," said Willkie. "Franklin D. Roosevelt is the common man and Wendell Willkie is the aristocrat.

"I read both speeches very carefully and that is what they argue. They argue that Franklin D. Roosevelt understands better than I do the aspirations and hopes of American labor.

"I won't describe to you Franklin Roosevelt's life. I shall describe only to you my own. I have worked in factories, steel mills, bakeries, on farms and on the range. I came up the hard way. I am the representative of aristocracy: look me over. . . .

"The only argument offered in this most critical hour in the history of this republic when we should have a united people, a people where no class distinctions are drawn, the only argument is that America should be divided into classes, that there are distinctions between the hopes and aspirations and the purposes of Americans in this critical hour, that Wendell Willkie is opposed to labor.

"Grew Up in Factory Time"

"Yet there is not a social gain that labor has made that could have a more vigorous defender than I.

"There is no man in all these United States whose record has shown that more. I grew up in a factory town. The first time I ever went into the court room was with my father, representing a labor union. And yet with those experiences in life I am the aristocrat. Let me say I hope there will never be another aristocrat who looks like me.

"Now we can't do that. It is too expensive a folly in these days to divide America that way. There isn't one social gain that labor has made that I won't protect to the utmost of my ability."

Idaho mining and lumber workers were assured by Willkie at Sandpoint, Idaho, that if elected, he will oppose any changes in the Wagner Labor Relations Act which might harm their interests.

The group included C. I. O. workers, A. F. L. members and industrial union members.

Labor Men Get Assurances

The industrial union men asked assurance that they could maintain their independent position, and the other union men wanted assurance that their organizations would have full protection. Spokesmen said that Willkie gave such assurance.

Jasper Hogeweide, a Coeur d'Alene lumber mill worker who got the day off to ride with Willkie through Idaho, reported: "He made a good impression on us. I'm not saying how I will vote, but I" say that if he could get out in the mines and mills and meet and talk with the boys as he did with us he would pick up some votes."

At Spokane, Willkie said the Roosevelt Administration has piled deficit on deficit, and that the conduct of foreign affairs has made the United States almost bereft of any friends in the entire world.

Willkie told his applauding listeners the Administration had left the United States completely unprepared, "and is only now trying to rush madly to build a stop-gap defense."

Willkie's present tour officially ends Friday in Madison, Wis. Immediately thereafter, however, the nominee will go to New York for the Republican State convention at White Plains, September 29.

He will address a Republican women's meeting in Detroit September 30 and on October 1 will visit other Michigan cities.

He will speak October 2 in Toledo and Cleveland, then will move through Pennsylvania, New York and New England.

Before his train the Pacific Northwest, Willkie reiterated his pledge that he would continue the Grand Coulee and Bonneville power projects if he were elected.

At Sandpoint, Willkie expressed regret he could make no more stops in the home State of the late Senator William E. Borah, for whom the candidate said he had great admiration.

"This election is a struggle between those who believe in the New Deal in its entirety and those who do not," Willkie said.

He told the trainside crowd that no rural electrification projects would be abandoned if he were elected.

Montana Pessimistic

Politicians who have been coming aboard the campaign train say that Willkie has a fighting chance to carry Washington and Idaho, but they are pessimistic about his prospects in Montana.

Miss Jeanette Rankin, of Butte, America's first woman member of Congress, who with tears streaming down her face voted against this country's entry into the World War, is given a chance to go back to the House. A Republican, she is running against bald-headed Jerry O'Connell, former member of the House who was defeated in 1938.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler is, of course, conceded an easy victory for another term. His Republican opponent, Lieut. Col. E. K. Cheadle had to go to camp the other day with his National Guard outfit.

The Political Arena

MRS. BAKER

Aboard Willkie Train (AP).—Republican Nominee Wendell L. Willkie released today a letter from Mrs. Newton D. Baker, of Cleveland, widow of President Wilson's Secretary of War, pledging her support in his campaign for the Presidency.

As a lifetime Democrat, she criticized the policies of "New Dealers who have seized control of our party" and the Government's spending program and declared "the hypocritical, mock convention in Chicago" was "the final straw."

"We feel that you," she wrote Willkie, "rather than the left wing of what was once the Democratic Party, more nearly represent our political ideals."

New York, Sept. 24 (AP).—Representative W. Martin, Jr., National Republican Chairman, today characterized the resignation of L. W. Robert, jr., from the secretaryship of the Democratic National Committee as a "dumping overboard" by which "they hope to lighten the load in a vain hope that the old donkey can stagger home."

Robert's firm, Robert & Co., of Atlanta, had received numerous engineering and architectural contracts from the Government and there had been public criticism.

Martin said the "New Dealers" were "face to face with defeat" and that "the Robert resignation, the changes this year in the Cabinet, the latest breathing spell for business, and the transfer of Labor Department activities, all tie up."

St. Paul, Sept. 24 (AP).—Declaring that "the election of Wendell Willkie would be the gravest mistake the American people could make," Howard Y. Williams, national organizer for the Farmer-Labor political federation, today issued a call for a Midwest conference of Progressives to meet in St. Paul, October 5 and 6.

The call which went to Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota, Montana and Iowa said the conference was called to "consider how Progressives can make their efforts count for the most in the 1940 Presidential and Congressional campaign.

St. Paul (Minn.) "looked bad" at first "but it's swinging in Mr. Roosevelt's direction," Mayor John McDonough of that city said yesterday after a call on President Roosevelt.

New York, Sept. 24 (AP).—Chairman Edward J. Flynn, of the Democratic National Committee, made public today a report from the regional director of the committee's Far Western division which said "the entire Western district will support President Roosevelt" in the November election.

Flynn said the report came from Leslie A. Miller, former Governor of Wyoming, and covered California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado and Nevada.

Sarah Lee Fain (Mrs. Walter Colquitt Fain), of San Marino, Calif., former member of the executive committee of the Virginia Democratic State Central Committee and a member of the Virginia House of Delegates, yesterday offered her support to Wendell Willkie.

"It certainly is strange," she said in a statement issued through the Republican National Committee, "after all the years I have spent advocating States rights and, as a Democrat, denouncing bureaucracy, that I now find it necessary to join the Republicans in order to preserve Jeffersonian democracy . . . I will try to undo the harm I did when I helped to put over Roosevelt."

Inadequate Housing To Slow Down Draft

All of First Levy Won't Be in Uniform Until March 1,

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Army officials told members of the Senate and House military committees yesterday that the first levy of drafted men—originally scheduled for call October 1—will not all be in uniform until March 1.

Delay in passing the conscription bill caused War Department officials earlier to extend the October date for inducting 400,000 draftees until later in the fall. Then it became evident that adequate housing would not be ready for all the men until after the first of the year, and yesterday it was admitted that all facilities for the first draft will not be available before the end of February.

A War Department statement issued after the Congressional delegation conferred with Army chiefs gave no induction dates but emphasized that the draftees will be taken "gradually" into service to permit completion of adequate facilities and "insure healthful and comfortable living conditions" for the men when they arrive in camp.

Much Building Ahead

The statement revealed that 30 cantonments and 16 semipermanent camps will have to be constructed to handle the draftees and mobilized National Guardsmen, besides enlargement of facilities at 90 existing posts, and construction of Army air stations on about 30 civilian airdromes.

Representative Smith (Democrat), of Connecticut, one of the group which met with Secretary of War Stimson and Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, said the number of men to be called under the draft this fall and winter is expected to be less than the planned 400,000, perhaps 360,000. The first increment will enter service in late November and the last—probably about 125,000 men—around the end of February.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt created a Defense Communications Board to prepare plans for control and coordination of all communications in connection with defense needs in time of national emergency.

A White House statement issued at the same time as an executive order setting up the board emphasized it was "basically a planning agency, without operating or procurement functions," and that it would not have power to "censor radio or other communications, or take over any facilities."

Increased Sabotage Penalty Voted

Members will be the chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, James L. Fly, the chief signal officers of the Army; Maj. Gen. J. O. Maugborgne, the director of Naval Communications; Rear Admiral Leigh Noyes, the Assistant Secretary of State in charge of international communication, Breckinridge Long, and the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in charge of the Coast Guard, Herbert E. Gaston. Fly will be chairman and Gaston secretary.

Establishment of the board was proposed by the Government departments and agencies dealing with communications and defense, while the radio industry cooperated in the plan, the White House said. Committees from every branch of communications and labor groups will be formed to carry on the studies, it was added.

Other defense developments of the day included:

The House passed legislation sharply increasing penalties for sabotage involving the national defense, and widening the application of existing law to cover almost any plant having defense work. The maximum penalty under the bill would be 10 years imprisonment.

Billion Spent in Week

President Roosevelt announced that in an eight-day period, September 9-17, the Army placed orders for $1,000,810,889 in defense wants including everything from war planes to blankets.

At his press conference, the President indicated he was opposed to constructing any more permanent gun emplacements for coast defense purposes.

The House passed another measure which would permit defense industries to assign Government contracts or other claims on the Government to banks or other private leaders as a means of obtaining credit for plant expansion or operating expenses.

Baby Recovering From Scalding

Eleven-month-old Nicholas Pedotto, seriously burned when he pulled a pot of boiling water from a stove at his home, 1926 Fourth street northeast, Monday, was slightly improved at Casualty Hospital last night.

The boy, according to police, was playing in the kitchen when he reached up to the stove and grabbed the pot, pulling the scalding liquid down over his body. He suffered second-degree burns to his entire body.

Defense Sidelights

Millikan Blames Isolationists If British Lose

England 'Fighting Our Battles,' Scientist Tells Californians

By the Associated Press

Pasadena, Calif., Sept. 24.—Dr. Robert A. Millikan, noted Scientist, believes that if Hitler destroys the British Empire "those most fully responsible for it will be those Americans who have been most active and successful in creating nn isolationist sentiment in the United States."

MILLIKAN

He told students at the California Institute of Technology, of which he is the head:

"We (in the United States) need two kinds of brains—first, brains to produce materials, devices and supplies for Britain, who is fighting our batttles for us, and second, brains to develop an intelligent public sentiment at home."

Philadelphia, Sept. 24 (AP).—Resolutions advocating an "immediate and effective" national defense program and elimination of "unsound national monetary policies" were approved today for presentation to the annual convention of the National Association of Life Underwriters.

The resolutions committee adopted both measures unanimously.

In the defense resolution however, the committee urged that precautions be taken to safeguard against "any debasement of our national currency and against any fiscal or monetary measures inimical to the interests of life insurance policy owners."

New York, Sept. 24 (AP).—A special Federal grand jury today began an investigation of the magnesium industry as a part of the general inquiry it started last July of reported price fixing and monopolistic practices in ten defense industries.

Special Assistant United States Attorney General Herbert Berman said he discussed with the jury the highly technical branches of the magnesium industry and its importance in the manufacture of airplane motors and parts, as a prelude to the actual examination of the industry's practices.

An East Coast Canadian Port, Sept. 24 (AP).—Canada's destroyer fleet was swelled to 13 ships today as six more of the 50 "over-age" craft recently acquired from the United States were comissioned into the Royal Canadian Navy.

Crews of Canadian sailors immediately manned the vessels, obtained from the United States in a trade for naval and air bases in the West Indies.

The ships were named the Annapolis, Columbia, Niagara, St. Francis, St. Clair and St. Croix after rivers common to the United States and Canada.

U. S. Can Arm Without Inflation, Moulton Says

Pittsburgh, Sept. 24 (AP).—Harold Glenn Moulton, president of the Brookings Institution, said tonight he believed the national defense program can be carried out without price inflation and without "increasing the magnitude of current Treasury deficits."

He gave those views in outlining a four-point policy for control of wartime prices in an address at the tenth anniversary dinner of the Maurice and Laura Falk Foundation, which has financed many of the economic research studies undertaken by Brookings Institution.

Program Summarized

Moulton's four-point program, based on study of inflation accompanying previous wars, was this:

1. The Army and Navy should not be given a free hand "to compete against each other on a price basis for limited supplies of materials."
2. The "principle that prices should be allowed to rise to whatever height is necessary to call forth additional output from high-cost producers should not be adopted."
3. Wage rates should not be increased "except where necessary in the interests of health and efficiency."
4. The war should be financed "just as far as possible without resort to credit expansion."

Speaking at the same dinner Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of General Motors, said it was "truly imperative" to revise the entire tax system and advocated immediate abandonment of what he termed "penalities and limitations which now beset" national economy. He added in his prepared address:

"During recent years, constantly increasing taxation has taken more and more of the investor's equity. The point has long since been reached where the profit motive is in jeopardy because so little profit actually remains. . . . furthermore, the methods of taxation, in line with existing political beliefs, have taken the form of uneconomic attempts to regulate and penalize free movement of the forces within the economy.

"(The taxation system) must be rebuilt on the principle of stimulating enterprise. It must revive the venture spirit by making it worth while to take the risk. . . ."

British Fear Axis May Grab Dakar as Base

Protection Is Sought Against Possible Loss Of Gibraltar

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 24.—Occupation of the French West African capital of Dakar by Anglo-French forces or the British navy is, from the British viewpoint, "a necessity," well-informed neutral diplomats declared tonight.

Fear Gibraltar might be besieged and taken and the possibility that Dakar might be used as an Axis submarine base for preying on Britain's important food imports from South America were given by these sources as the main reasons for "immediate action" at Dakar.

There was a tendency to feel that failure of the colony's population to rally to free French Gen. Charles de Gaulle disclosed weakness in his political leadership. There was no criticism of his military qualities, however.

De Gaulle's political deficiences already had been shown, these commentators said, by the fact that no distinguished French politician had associated himself with De Gaulle's French national committee.

No Appeal to Politicians

Refusal of former Premier Leon Blum to join the De Gaulle movement was said to show that it has no great appeal to those portions of French political life which were most hostile to Naziism prior to the war's outbreak.

A communique issued by De Gaulle's headquarters in London assumed for him full responsibility for the Dakar action, declaring that he had gone there with French military, naval and aerial forces in French ships under the French ensign, and that British naval forces were on hand only to assure "supplementary protection" against any attack that may be inspired by Germans and carried out with their participation.

The communique blamed the Dakar authorities for having opened hostilities against their own people.

This communique made no mention of Dakar's possibilities as a submarine base, but did say it had several important airports which the Germans had taken over and from which they intended to resume air service to South America.

The town's rail and cable connections also were mentioned as extremely important.

Capture Would Be Popular

Neutral military sources meanwhile emphasized the great and increased importance of Dakar to the British.

"If Gibraltar should be taken," they said, "Britain would be without a base for naval operations in the southeast Atlantic. Dakar would provide such a base, not as good as Gibraltar, but certainly good enough to allow smaller ships to put in for repairs."

Thus, these sources say, the answer to Dakar's rebuff of Gen. De Gaulle lies in the guns of the British navy.

The capture of Dakar would be popular in Britain, according to the comment of sources in touch with parliamentary opinion.

These point out that many Britons are "tired of worrying what someone will say if we do this or that" and are equally weary of showing "exaggerated respect for the opinions and feeling of refugee governments."

These persons hold, "there is no use in placing too much hope in the French, Polish, Czech or other governments in our midst.

"The enslaved peoples of Europe will welcome us and rise in revolt only when we hit Germany harder than she hits us.

"In matters such as Dakar, our motto should be:

Committee Urges Senate to Ratify Pact of Havana

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee, told by Secretary of State Hull that European possessions in the Western Hemisphere must not become a battleground of the present war, unanimously recommended yesterday that the Senate ratify the treaty of Havana.

The treaty, encompassing an agreement between the United States and the 21 Latin-American countries to cooperate in the temporary taking over of European possessions at any threat of change in sovereignty, was sent to the committee last week by President Roosevelt, accompanied by a letter from Hull.

Territory involved includes possessions in this hemisphere of France, which already has bowed in defeat to Germany; of the Netherlands, overrun by German armies, and of Great Britain.

35 Guard Adjutants General Here to Discuss Draft Plans

Thirty-five adjutants general of the National Guard, in the opening session of an off-the-record convention at the Washington Hotel, yesterday discussed conscription, its effect on the National Guard, and the business of being adjutants general.

Presiding over the meeting was Brig. Gen. Charles D. Grahl, of Des Moines, Iowa.

The generals are convened in order to glean certain information relative to conscription, because the adjutant general offices in many States will serve also as selective service headquarters, it was reported.

The general, who had been present at the National Guard maneuvers at Camp Ripley, Minn., said he thought it was true the Guard was underequipped. He declared there is a deficiency of tanks, planes and certain types of guns.

Gen. Grahl enlisted in the World War as a private, and rose to a lieutenancy by the time of the Armistice. And he fought with the famous Rainbow Division.

8 Night Schools To Have Classes In First Aid

Accident Prevention Also to Be Taught For the First Time

New courses in current social problems, economic and industrial geography, first aid and accident prevention await adults at public night schools tonight.

Enrollment of 7,179 on the opening night Monday is expected to rise materially as classes get under way tonight.

For the first time, first aid and accident prevention will be taught in all the eight white night schools, E. J. Lockwood, director, said. Last session this course was offered in only three of the schools. The Red Cross will furnish instructors.

The eight colored night schools are expecting to have similar courses, C. O. Lewis, director, said.

A course in current social problems was so successful in night classes at Roosevelt High School last session that it will be added at Hine, Western and McKinley, Lockwood said.

Interest in Latin America was reflected in the enrollment of 160 persons in first-year Spanish at Central night school, when only a fraction of that number was expected, Lockwood said. Still unsolved is the problem of how to accommodate that number, since there is no provision for additional teachers.

Economic and industrial geography is a course to be introduced at Hine, Roosevelt and Western.

Vocational classes, which will be expanded this year, will include arc and acetylene welding, auto mechanics, cabinet and millwork, electric motors, machine shop, pattern making, radio and sheet metal work. Some of these classes will be held at each of three white schools, Abbot, McKinley and Chamberlain.

A new course in the care of plane engines will be offered at Phelps Night School. Other courses offered there for colored students will include auto mechanics, woodworking, machine shop, welding and electricity. Several of these will be given at Armstrong Night School also.

In night schools for white students, new or expanded courses will include art appreciation, art metal, contemporary literature, glee club, music appreciation, short story writing. Homemaking courses, which were started last year, will deal with child care, clothing, consumer education, foods, handcrafts, interior decoration.

The night classes, which meet on Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, drew 5,191 to white schools on the opening night and 1,988 to colored schools.

Sergeant Invents Super Bomb

San Diego, Calif., Sept. 24 (AP).—An aerial bomb which its inventor contends can have its destructive power multiplied 50-fold by a new method of construction has been developed by Master Sergt. Frank Newton, head of the ordnance department, Fort Rosecrans.

Newton said a 2,000-pound bomb with this revolutionary development could be given the annihilating effect of a 100,000-pound missile without any increase in weight by altering the amount of oxygen introduced.

"This is the first time I have ever written to any columnist, or in fact to any newspaper. I just couldn't resist an opportunity to tell you about a certain bridge hand," writes M. K., submitting today's hand, on which he made five spades, redoubled, with help from the opponents and a squeeze.

CAFE CAPRICE'S FALL OPENING. Cafe Caprice, the completely charming night spot of the Roger Smith Hotel, will toss its "fall opening party" tomorrow night. The Andrini Trio, fresh from Manhattan, will play for dancing in the lushly Latin manner, with emphasis on mandolin (a new instrument in our town) and piano, also intrigue the customers with songs. Caprice, a delightful and favorite place, is certain to be crowded for this fiesta. Cordial Bob Korn will greet you and the smiling generation hovering in the background will be Manager Dan Wathey, of the Roger Smith... Caprice's fall program includes dancing from 10 to 1 while Andrini will mandolino and sing between 5 and 7 p. m.

No less a personage than Don Rice, whom you've often seen at the Capitol and Earle Theaters, will head the floor show at Del Rio's "autumn opening," now definitely scheduled for Thursday, October 10.

LYNN ALLISON, one of Washington's pet songbirds, has joined Bert Bernath's Orchestra and will carol at the chi-chi fall opening of the Pall Mall Room tomorrow eve. The Bernath Orchestra sounds like a million at rehearsal, especially the new double-piano of Eddie Chase and Bob Brewer and the vocals of Russ Cullen and Marty Rubin, not to mention Maestro Bert's polished violining. Arthur Marchisio's beaming smile will again light up the entrance to Pall Mall.

LIKE FATHER, LIKE SON. Bill Strickland, jr., son of Lotus' Bill Strickland, has just gone to his daddy's old school, Riverside Academy, Gainesville, Ga., where he'll play piano and a couple of other instruments in the school band.

TONIGHT'S THE NIGHT for that splendificent "fall opening" of the Rainbow Room. Arch McDonald and Art Reilly will come over from their radio stations and emcee. Yvonne Logan, the great big bouncing baby of Maryland Gardens, will probably bust up the show with "Ferdinand." Jack Rollins and Kathleen Dooley will rumba and conga and maybe they'll bomba. Pat McGroary will pass out funnier hats than those you see in the F street windows. Last one in the Rainbow Room's a sissy!

Washington papers didn't say much about Patricia Prochnik, daughter of the former Austrian Minister, joining a Meyer Davis Band to sing at private social functions. But someone has sent a copy of the New York World-Telly with a column story about Pat and huge picture. When she was in town Patricia sang at the Lounge Riviera whenever the spirit moved her.

LYNN ALLISON, songstress at the Pall Mall Room, opening tomorrow

MELODY PREFERRED. Grant Thompson's Band has just received a new set of Negro spiritual orchestrations; will play them for the first time tonight. They're done in swing time with vocals by Madge Marley and are too beautiful... It's not all jive in Jack Schaeffer's Casino Royal Orchestra, though Jack's jive songs are colossal. Ray Nelson's warbling of such numbers as "Two Love Birds" is in a class of its own, too... Lots of people are going to miss Marianne Lee and her swing-singing from the Hi Hat, but she'll have a lovely successor in Camilla Lazari who arrives next Monday, sings like a coloratura canary... Most amusing melody specialty in town is the Neptune Room's "Three Pianos." Evalyn Tyner, "Curly" Fox and Jimmy Smiley all sit at one piano and play madly. We never could find out what they played.

ANCHORED IN THE ANCHOR ROOM are loads of customers every eve. Saucy Eileen George is one big reason, though she's so little. Eileen is now singing a bunch of tunes from Bing Crosby's new "Rhythm on the Range."

ROAMIN' IN THE GLOAMIN'. Berk Motley and his lads at Boulevard Farms' "Dancing Campus" all have the grandest Georgia accents... Rodd Raffell personally arranges all those sweet tunes his band plays at the Nightingale... Al Oddone of the Gay Nineties is maestro, guitarist, singer and emcee, and verra smart in each job.

'This War Decided,' Nazis Say; Fight to Continue 'on All Fronts'

Balkan Objectives Foreseen in German Diplomatic Offensive

By Louis P. Lochner,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Sept. 24.—The Rome-Berlin Axis, authorized German sources say, "will continue to fight on all fronts, not only militarily but also diplomatically and politically," regardless of what the United States does.

From this it may be deduced that Egypt, Greece, Turkey and possibly, Yugoslavia, will be objectives of diplomatic offensives, while the political effort to foster a cleavage among the English people also will be intensified.

It now appears certain that Italian Premier Mussolini and Joachim von Ribbentrop, Germany's foreign minister, included the United States' present and potential war position in their recent Rome consultations. Authorized sources asserted that the attitude of Britain's "actual or potential seconds" was interesting only theoretically, since "this war is already decided."

It appears likely that one development will be an attempt to block Britain's outlet from the Mediterranean through the Suez Canal by an attack on Egypt.

If Spain should enter the war, Gibraltar might be made unsafe for the British fleet. Ramon Serrano Suner, Spanish minister of government, was said to be one of the earliest visitors scheduled for Ribbentrop, who returned from Rome last night.

Turk Premier Sees Greek Minister

Ankara, Sept. 24 (AP).—In the face of Axis threats, Turkish Premier Refik Saydam today received the Greek minister after the Turkish minister to Athens had conferred with Greece's Premier Metaxas.

Both countries were said to fear that an Italian-German thrust might come at any moment in the guise of prosecuting the war against Britain.

Allied with Turkey and Greece in the old Balkan Entente, Yugoslavia is authoritatively reported to have "reaffirmed loyalty to the Rome-Berlin axis."

It is understood here that Yugoslavia is ready to discuss small territorial concessions with the Axis satellites, Hungary and Bulgaria, provided Rome and Berlin raise no demands of their own.

Nazis Foresee Ciano Visit

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Sept. 24.—There was neither confirmation nor denial in Berlin today of reports Italian Foreign Minister Ciano will visit the Reich capital in the immediate future, but neutral diplomatic quarters consider such a visit more than probable at the end of this week.

It is hinted here that such a visit will not be for the purpose of resuming conversations initiated in Rome, but to give formal expression to the conclusion of some new major diplomatic action touched upon in the course of the Rome discussions there by the Duce, Ribbentrop and Ciano.

The presence in Berlin of the interior and the return of the Reich Ambassador from Moscow are accepted as significant commentaries on the diplomatic situation.

Suspicious of United States

The United States, in the eyes of the Axis Powers, is now, in principle, more than just a neutral friend of Britain. For, it was suggested that the factual interpretation placed by the Washington Government on the principle of neutrality left the Rome and Berlin governments no other choice than viewing the American "neutrality" in a highly suspicious light.

Meanwhile, talk in official quarters continues to be liberally hedged in cryptic allusions to the alleged deeper implications of the Rome talks, which these quarters are confident will shortly appear as diplomatic developments of more than ordinary significance.

The well informed Essener National Zeitung declares the Rome discussions will have further results; that conversations with other statesmen may be expected, and that the Axis leaders will shortly again be in intimate contact with each other.

The semiofficial "Service from Germany" declares German press comments indicate the Rome meeting was but the beginning of a development which indicates the "universality of the new order in all regions of the Mediterranean and Africa."

Truck Trailer Swerves, Kills 2 Changing Tire

Struck by a truck-trailer as they changed a tire, Noah Stevens Mathena, 48, of 2807 Pershing drive, Arlington, Va., and Mrs. Virginia Martha Reynolds, 26, of Capitol Heights, Md., were killed Monday night near Roanoke, Va., the Associated Press reported yesterday.

Mrs. Reynolds was holding a match while Mathena removed the rear wheel of the car, parked on U. S. Route 11, 3 miles south of Buchanan, Conie Sue Mathena, his 6-yearold daughter, and Ramsey and Mamie Caldwell, of Cloverdale, Va., occupants of the car, were not injured.

The truck driver, George F. Kellam, 23, of Ridgeway, Va., said the car's baggage compartment lid had been raised obscuring the rear light.

Woman Seized in Plan to Extort $50,000 From Helen Frick

Note Threatened To 'Bomb Everything' Steel Heiress Has

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 24.—An attempt to extort $50,000 from Miss Helen Clay Frick, heiress of the steel multimillionaire and art collector Henry Frick, under threat of bombing "everything she had," was disclosed by the Federal Bureau of Investigation today with the arrest of a middle-aged woman charged with the plot.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover said that Mrs. Stanley Beggs, 46, of Lyndhurst, N. J., an alien who came to this country from Canada in 1910, had confessed sending three threatening letters to Miss Frick between August 14 and September 19.

In the third note, Hoover said, Mrs. Beggs referred to the Hercules Powder Co. blast at Kenvil, N. J., on September 12 and said the same thing would happen to Miss Frick unless she complied with the demands.

Miss Frick is one of two children of Henry Clay Frick, of Pittsburgh, whose estate was valued at $92,953,552 in a tax appraisal filed four years after his death in 1919.

Mrs. Beggs was arrested this morning, Hoover said, as a messenger delivered to her a package in accordance with her instructions.

She was arraigned late today before United States Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter, who held her in $10,000 bail.

Mrs. Beggs said she wanted the money, Hoover related, to buy a home and a boat. He said her husband was "in no way involved."

High Court Asked To Reverse Coal, Child Labor Stand

The Government urged the Supreme Court yesterday to overrule two precedent-making decisions of the past and uphold the wage-hour law.

This course was advocated by Solicitor General Francis Biddle in a brief filed preparatory to arguing constitutionality of the statute fixing minimum pay and maximum work week for employes in interstate commerce.

Referring to the 1918 opinion which invalidated a statute prohibiting the interstate transportation of child-made goods, the Solicitor General contended that the Supreme Court had "abandoned the principles" which controlled that decision and it should be "expressly overruled."

He also argued that the Guffey Act decision, which invalidated a law regulating the soft coal industry, "is wholly inconsistent with subsequent decisions" and "should now be overruled."

Both opinions held that manufacture should be regulated by States and not by the Federal Government.

Wicomico Man Freed In Carpenter's Slaying

Salisbury, Md., Sept. 24 (AP).—Raymond Townsend was freed today of a charge that he murdered Carl H. West, 61-year-old former carpenter.

A Wicomico County jury acquitted Townsend after hearing him testify that, although he was with West early on the day he was found dead, he knew nothing about the carpenter's death.

West's battered body, showing fatal blows on the neck and head, was found in a weed patch near the city dump last August 18.

Prisoner Faces 27-Year Maximum For Police Attack

Richard Reeves, 24, colored, accused of mauling a policeman when seized for a misdemeanor, will be liable to 27 years in jail if he is convicted of all the resulting charges.

Patrolman Lawrence R. Henson arrested Reeves at Seventh and T streets northwest August 11 for throwing trash in the street. The maximum penalty for this is a $300 fine.

Henson and other witnesses said a battle followed.

The District grand jury yesterday indicted Reeves for assault with a dangerous weapon (ten years in jail maximum), assault with intent to kill (15 years maximum) and assault on an officer (two years and $500 maximum).

Chinese Church Moves to Get Rid Of $9,500 Debt

A campaign to clear the remaining debt of $9,500 on the new property at 1011 L street northwest is being conducted by the Chinese Community Church, of whose board of managers Fred J. Rossiter is chairman. H. H. Sexton is finance commmittee chairman.

The Chinese Church, which for several years has been worshiping on Sunday afternoons at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, last September purchased the L street dwelling, where the language school, Sunday school, young people's meetings and other activities are conducted.

Total cost was more than $20,000, including remodeling and furnishings. Oriental and Occidental supporters of the congregation contributed $11,000.

3 Million See Colorful Legion Parade

By the Associated Press

Boston, Sept. 24.—The American Legion marched again today before a record smashing crowd, estimated at more than 3,000,000.

Scores of spectators collapsed and were carried off as the graying Legionnaires and their auxiliaries and bands, 100,000 strong, furnished Boston with a color-splashed spectacle, as they dropped for the day all contemplation of their twenty-second convention's more serious business.

Legion officials termed the parade crowd the greatest in the organization's history and joined in the official police estimate that it exceeded 3,000,000 spectators.

Over a 2¼-mile route, the marchers trooped from shortly after dawn until long after dusk. In almost unending din and in a seldom broken line, bands blared, banners waved, drum majorettes strutted, and miniature cannon roared as the convention canes of the ex-service men clack-clacked a steady cadence on the hard pavement.

The color guard of the Illinois delegation—Legionnaires outfitted in the uniforms of soldiers from each of the Nation's wars—lent emphasis to the historical background of the Legion's "coming-of-age" convention parade, so dubbed by President Roosevelt on the organization's twenty-first birthday.

There was a place, too, in the parade, for history in the making. Mechanized units of the Nation's expanding army rolled through living lanes, while high overhead, an army bomber and a pursuit plane swooped and dipped in tribute to the Legion.

Borne by some Legionnaires were placards reflecting the war abroad.

"There will always be an England," was the word of one.

"To Hell with Hitler," read another.

"God Bless America," said a third.

All over the country, more smokers are buying Chesterfields today than ever before because these Cooler, Better-Tasting and Definitely Milder cigarettes give them what they want. That's why smokers call Chesterfield the Smoker's Cigarette.

Smokers like yourself know they can depend on Chesterfield's Right Combination of Turkish and Domestic tobaccos for the best things of smoking. Chesterfield smokers get the benefits of every modern improvement in cigarette making.

BETTER MADE FOR BETTER SMOKING
Here as seen in the new film "TOBACCOLAND, U. S. A." is Chesterfield's electric detector. Twenty mechanical fingers examine each cigarette in a pack and if there is the slightest imperfection a light flashes and the entire pack is automatically ejected.

Cambridge Burning, Germans Report

Nazi Fliers Check Results of Reprisals For Heidelberg Attack

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Sept. 24.—Bomb hits on London's busy Waterloo Station and on a Southampton airplane factory were announced by German sources tonight in the continual Battle of Britain, while DNB, official German news agency, claimed particularly "great damage" done to the English university center of Cambridge.

"The heaviest bombs, in addition to a great number of explosive bombs of medium caliber and incendiary bombs," were scattered over Cambridge, DNB said, quoting "informed sources."

Nazi reconnaissance planes visited Cambridge today, the agency said, and confirmed that as a result of the overnight attack "great fires were in progress and great clouds of smoke enveloped wide districts."

This blow, described as a reprisal, was called "the only possible way to show the British the foolishness of attacks on such places as the university city of Heidelberg."

Waterloo Statino, in London, terminus of the railway linking London with south England, was "effectively" bombed today, the Germans said, while aerial scouts were quoted as sighting new fires all over London, particularly in the western district.

"Old fires," near London's India Docks, have assumed gigantic proportions after follow-up raids today, the Nazi sources asserted.

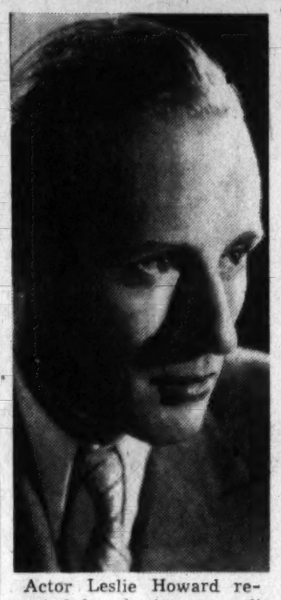
Many effective hits were claimed on the Southampton airplane factory. (The British said a church and other nonmilitary objectives were hit.)

In the day's fighting, 18 British planes were reported destroyed with only one German machine missing.

In the overnight raids on England, the German command said fires were set at Liverpool and in a munitions store at Great Yarmouth, and Newcastle military targets were hit.

Hollywood Stars Escape Death In Nazi Air Raid

RICHARD GREEN WITH ACTRESS VIRGINIA FIELD



Actor Leslie Howard reported by short-wave radio that he and Richard Green, another actor who has appeared in Hollywood productions, narrowly escaped death in London last week when a Nazi bomb struck Howard's apartment house.

Lake's Loss of License Cut to Two Months

The ABC Board's ruling against Jimmy Lake's night club and restaurant, 519 Ninth street northwest, was modified by the District Commissioners yesterday to provide suspension of his liquor license for two months instead of three.

The decision, made after a two-hour plea by Lake's attorney, James O'Shea, will permit Lake to sell alcoholic beverages in December, including Christmas and New Year's Eve. The suspension is effective October 1.

D. C. Elks Name Commission To Aid Order's Defense Drive

A national defense committee to carry out a three-point program sponsored by the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks was established yesterday by Washington Lodge, No. 15.

The program:

To uphold and teach Americanism and the democratic form of government.

To discover and report treasonable, subversive and fifth column activities.

The Washington committee, announced by L. Martin Young, exalted ruler of the lodge, includes Sefton Darr, chairman; Leo A. Rover, Lieut. Col. E. M. Spencer, Samuel Richards and William S. Shelby, all active in District affairs.

Announcement of the local committee came simultaneously with a statement outlining the program by James R. Nicholson, chairman of the Elks national defense commission. The commission was set up following the Elks convention at which the delegates pledged active support of the fraternal order's 500,000 members in 1400 cities, to the defense drive.

First act of the commission was to communicate its plans to President Roosevelt, Secretary of War Stimson, Secretary of the Navy Knox and J. Edgar Hoover, director, Federal Bureau of Investigation. Each "stressed the importance" of the Elks' activity, according to Nicholson.

The defense program, to be carried out among all lodges, will include a drive to expand vocational training in public schools, promotion of more general and constant display of the flag, organization of special functions in recognition of men called to the armed services.

Housing Parley Here Tonight

Results of the United Federal Workers' survey of Government workers' housing needs will be made public tonight at the second housing conference sponsored by the Washington Industrial Union Council.

The conference, to be held in the auditorium of the North Interior Building, starting at 8 p. m., also will consider the problem of rent control.

Committee Favors Nazi Industry Probe

The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee yesterday gave unanimous approval to a resolution authorizing congressional investigation of any foreign controls in American industry which are impeding the national defense program. Sponsor of the resolution is the committee chairman, Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana.

The committee report noted that Germany's interest in American industry is understood to amount to "many hundreds of millions of dollars," while "it is believed that certain drugs, optical equipment, chemicals, mineral alloys, etc., are subject to absentee control or pressures which investigation may disclose to be inappropriate to the country's defense need."

"When the full facts are learned," the report declared, "they may dwarf the facts learned during the World War period, for the tremendous postwar expansion of foreign investment in this country due to unsettled European conditions may have extended the scope of foreign control over our domestic commerce."

The report asserts that American investments in Germany, estimated to total $2,000,000,000, "may already have been utilized in some degree to blackmail American interests whose German plants are endangered."

Hershey Urges U.S., Army Get Together

The Nation must look upon its Army as a college regards its football team, Lieut. Col. Lewis B. Hershey, executive secretary of the Army and Navy Selective Service Committee, declared last night.

Speaking to the White House Photographers Association at the Willard Hotel, Col. Hershey said that the Army has been held apart from the Nation for too long. Conscription, he added, will help integrate the two, so that the country will take pride and active interest in the armed forces.

4,044 Enroll In Red Cross Drive in Day

Best Workers to Get Chance to Further Cause on Radio

The first full day's drive in the annual Red Cross Roll Call brought 4,044 enrollments, it was announced yesterday at campaign headquarters.

Government units reported the most memberships for the day, 501; followed by 427 enrollments by general business units. Large special memberships continue to be received, according to General Chairman Edgar Morris.

Booths have been opened in hotels, banks, theaters, and department stores, and returns from these units are expected to swell the total today. A special booth opened in a store on the ground floor of the Trans-Lux Building, 728 Fourteenth street northwest, where Gordon Hittenmark, WRC announcer, will broadcast his regular program each morning of the drive.

Beginning this morning, Hittenmark will interview each day a Roll Call volunteer worker selected as the "honor worker" of the preceding day. This morning he will interview William Blum, jr., chairman of Area 5 of the general business committee, who reported more key workers in his area than in any of the other business units. His group is composed of Junior Board of Commerce members.

The Trans-Lux Building booth, beginning this morning, will feature an exhibit of war relief garments made by Department of Agriculture members. The booth will be open each day during Hittenmark's early broadcast, from 12 to 1:30 p. m., and from 4:30 to 6 p. m. Enrollments will be received by members of the Red Cross Chapter Volunteer Service Corps during these hours.

An additional booth will be opened today in the National Press Club, where a representative of a different volunteer corps will be on duty each day. Today the Braille Corps will be represented and the booth attendeant will present an exhibit of the work of her group for the blind.

The Red Cross Roll Call will be featured at the luncheon of the Lions Club at 12:30 p. m., today at the Mayflower Hotel. Livingston Blair, assistant director of the American Junior Red Cross, will be the principal speaker. This is the first of a series of speaking programs arranged for local clubs and organizations by the Roll Call Speakers Bureau.

Dr. Zabriskie Named Dean Of Va. Theological Seminary

The elevation of Dr. Alexander C. Zabriskie from church history professor to dean, and other faculty changes, have been announced at Virginia (Episcopal) Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.

The institution opened its 118th annual sessions last Wednesday with a capacity enrollment of 79 students, representing 40 colleges and universities and 24 States.

Successor to Dr. Wallace E. Rollins, who retired at last commencement, Dean Zabriskie joined the teaching staff in 1925 after pastoral work in New York State. He was graduated from Groton School, Princeton University and Virginia Seminary, and did graduate work at Cambridge University, England. While in the Naval Aviation Corps during the first World War, he served abroad as pilot and flight commander.

The Rev. Robert O. Kevin, Ph. D., for the last eight years rector of Grace Church, Kirkwood, Mo., and retiring chairman of the Missouri Diocese's board of religious education, succeeds the late Dr. Thomas Nelson as professor of Old Testment language and literature. He received his B. A. and Ph. D. degrees from the University of Pennsylvania, and his B. D. from the Philadelphia Divinity School.

The Rev. Robert F. Gibson, jr., has become a teaching fellow in the history department. He took his M. A. degree at the University of Virginia, and is a graduate of Virginia Seminary.

Many of America's most distinguished Episcopal clergymen are products of the seminary.

Among its graduates of the pre-Civil War era were Dr. Phillips Brooks, once rector of historic Trinity Church, Boston, to which Dr. Oliver J. Hart, retiring rector of St. John's Church in Washington, is going as new rector; Dr. Henry Codman Potter, once Bishop of New York, and founders of three Episcopal mission fields—William J. Boone, of China; Channing Moore Williams, Japan, and John Payne, Liberia. The seminary always has been noted for its contribution to missionary work.

Noted clergymen of today who attended the seminary include the Right Rev. Saint George Tucker, D. D., presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church and Bishop of Virginia; the Rev. C. Leslie Glenn, rector of Christ Church, Cambridge, and rector-elect of St. John's, Lafayette Square, Washington, and the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, Dean of Washington, and many others.

While the seminary began its career in 1823 in a building at the corner of North Washington and King streets, Alexandria, its origin was in 1818, when a group of clergy and laymen from Georgetown, Washington and Alexandria founded a society for the ministerial education of young men of the Episcopal Church.

They included Francis Scott Key, author of "The Star-Spangled Banner," and the Rev. William Meade, later Bishop of Virginia. They helped found a professorship in theology at William and Mary College in 1821, but two years later discontinued it.

At Dakar

A fog as thick as that which frequently shrouds the West African coast at this season obscures the developments at Dakar during recent days.

According to the Vichy version, a squadron of British warships opened fire on that port on Monday afternoon and continued the bombardment for eight hours. The shelling resulted in the death of more than 100 inhabitants and caused severe damage in the port and city. But an attempt initiated by Gen. de Gaulle, leader of the London Committee for "Free Frenchmen," to land troops and seize the city was repulsed, it is reported from Vichy.

The British version of what occurred differs from this in several important particulars. London insists that no attempt at landing has been made, that emissaries carrying a white flag of truce were fired upon and killed. It is not denied, however, that operations at Dakar "are in progress," or that a British flotilla is somewhere in the vicinity of that strategically vital Senegalese port.

It is apparent, therefore, that the British have designs on Dakar. A large part of French Equatorial Africa has rebelled against the Vichy government and rejoined Great Britain in the war on the Axis powers. It is admitted in the capital of unoccupied France that other parts of French Africa are "boiling." Should these other areas go over to Gen. de Gaulle, the British situation in the Mediterranean would greatly be improved. For one thing, Italy would then find it necessary to divide her forces in Libya. The attack now under way against the British in Egypt would thus become more difficult.

So far, however, there is no certainty that French Morocco, Algeria and Tunis will break away from Vichy. But there are indications that the Axis, in conjunction with Spain, may soon launch an attack on Gibraltar. If that occurs and is successful, the British will need Dakar as a base from which to continue the blockade.

This latest clash between British and French forces is no less tragic than the incident at Oran. But the British apparently feel that the risk of offending Vichy must be run. The situation for Great Britain would be infinitely worse if Dakar were made into a German and Italian base.

Incidentally, it makes a vast difference to the United States and the other nations of this hemisphere who controls Dakar. For Dakar is the point on the African continent nearest to South America, separated from Natal, Brazil, by only 1,400 miles. In the hands of an aggressor, it could be made the spearpoint of an attack on this hemisphere.

To Make It Equitable

The Commissioners have recommended to Congress that the District income-tax law be amended so that the levy may be applied on the basis of residence rather than domicile. That change is essential to close a legal loophole in the present law and to eliminate gross inequities.

It is deplorable, however, that the legislation should have been tied up in the Budget Bureau for almost four months. It has arrived at the Capitol after the House District Committee has concluded its labors for the session and Congress is preparing either to recess or adjourn. This unexplained delay is but another example of unjustified interference by the Budget Bureau in local affairs.

Had the District reorganization bill, now lying dormant in the Senate District Committee, been a law last May, when the Commissioners drafted their report, the matter would have reached Congress in ample time for action at the present session. The report would have gone directly to Congress.

The amendments proposed by the Commissioners follow generally the bill introduced by Representative Dirksen, sponsor of the Income-Tax Act.

District tax officials estimate, on the basis of Federal returns, that 18,000 Washington residents have ignored the local tax on the ground that they maintain legal domiciles elsewhere. Numerous other residents have paid the tax under protest. And the decision of the Court of Appeals in the Sweeney case suggests that many of these protests will be sustained.

There can be no reasonable argument for exemption from the District income tax of persons who are residents in every respect, except for voting purposes. They enjoy all the municipal services that are provided to native Washingtonians, and they should pay for them accordingly.

Both Maryland and Virginia levy their income taxes on the basis of residence. As a consequence they are in a position to drain the District of revenue to which it is justly entitled.

In The Doghouse

Wendell Willkie's plea that American industry be released from the doghouse has been followed by a scientific analysis of factory output and efficiency during the last 40 years. The latter address was made at Pittsburgh last night by Dr. Leo Wolman, of the National Bureau of Economic Research, formerly chairman of the Labor Advisory board of the NRA.

Before the depression of 1929, Dr. Wolman points out, all the economic recessions experienced by this country were of short duration and the losses suffered were soon recouped. But the depression of the thirties has lasted more than a decade. At the end of 1939, says Dr. Wolman, "the industry of the country had yet shown no signs of resuming the rate of production characteristic of the earlier decades . . ."

Probably for the first time in our history productive enterprise has not only failed to progress for ten years, it has actually slipped backward. Dr. Wolman notes that from 1899 to 1909 factory output increased at the rate of 4.7 per cent a year. In the next decade the corresponding increase was 3.4 per cent. In the third decade of this century the gain was stepped up to 5.1 per cent annually. But in the fourth decade, 1929-39, these consistent gains were turned to a slight loss. On a per capita basis, factory output has declined at the rate of nearly 1 per cent a year since 1929.

The research experts found also that "employment, likewise, failed to record more than a nominal advance." Stagnation for business, as Mr. Willkie drove home with particular effectiveness in his Seattle address, inevitably means disastrous unemployment for working men.

Dr. Wolman drew these conclusions:

> American industry has created a magnificent machine for the production of goods. Except in these last years, this productive machinery has consistently overcome economic reversals and gone on to ever-increasing output and opportunities for employment . . . .
> One fact is, at least, clear—the part played in progress by new and expanding industries and by the modernization and overhauling of old and obsolete industries. Unless the political and economic conditions favorable to the initiation of such enterprises . . . exist, we may be forced to become content with a laggard industry, stationary or declining employment, and a permanent army of unemployed, which looks for a living not to the wages of industry but to the subsidies of Government.

No one could possibly criticize the Administration for the severe economic reverses of 1929-32. But, with all of its outpouring of Government funds in the last seven years it has failed to revive industrial production. So we still have a large army of unemployed and the Government must still spend billions for their relief.

Thus Dr. Wolman's scientific approach and Mr. Willkie's "common-sense" approach to this grave problem lead to essentially the same conclusion. Jobs can be created only by encouraging new enterprises and by giving industry a chance to function under favorable circumstances. Yet industry is still suffering from political paralysis. At a time when the national interest demands increased production on a large scale our economic system is utilizing only part of its facilities and man power.

Mr. Willkie is making effective use of this grave weakness in the New Deal. If he continues to talk as plainly and frankly as he did at Seattle, a vast number of those who hope for something more than doles and WPA jobs may well see our foremost domestic problem in a new light.

Nazis In Uruguay

Uruguay is the smallest as well as one of the most enlightened and progressive of South American republics. Like the other nations of this hemisphere, it has opened its doors to men of all races, creeds and national origins. But in some cases this hospitality has been rewarded with base treachery.

Last June a special investigating committee of the Uruguayan Congress uncovered a well-organized Nazi military plot to seize Uruguay and transform her into a German agricultural colony. But, while 12 Nazi agents were arrested as a result of this discovery, they were ultimately released. Some of them, as it happened, enjoyed diplomatic immunity. The release of others resulted from the unwillingness of the Uruguayan authorities to come to grips with a dangerous issue. An aroused public opinion has since forced the government to act.

The charges on which eight Uruguayan Nazi leaders have now been indicted are of interest to every nation in this hemisphere. For in greater or lesser measure what has been happening in that little Latin-American republic has been happening elsewhere in the New World. Evidence uncovered by the investigating committee indicates very clearly that Hitler hoped to use Uruguay as a base of operations from which to extend Germany's domination to the South American continent.

The indictment against eight Nazi leaders now facing trial charges them with taking direct orders from Berlin and pledging themselves under oath to keep unimpaired their loyalty to the Fuehrer and the Third Reich. They are organized in precisely the same way and for exactly the same purposes as is the Nazi Party in Germany. In other words, the Uruguayan Nazi Party is simply and solely the spearpoint of German imperialism in that country.

Such a state of affairs threatens the safety and independence of Uruguay and other Latin-American countries. It is nonetheless encouraging that the smallest of the South American republics is now defying German pressure and bringing the matter out into the open through a public trial involving the ringleaders of the seditious movement.

Japan In Indo-China

Not content with the far-reaching concessions in Indo-China which they succeeded in wresting from the harassed and helpless French government at Vichy, the Japanese have proceeded to take the law into their own hands. An invasion of France's important Far Eastern colony has begun.

That invasion appears to be meeting with resistance. In Vichy this is explained on the ground that there had not been time enough to notify all French border troops. Those not notified resisted the entry of Japanese troops. But another, and perhaps more accurate, explanation is that the French authorities of that colony were unwilling to sanction a complete and humiliating surrender to the Japanese.

The Japanese have made no secret of their plan to capitalize France's difficulties by securing a foothold in Indo-China. Under pressure, Vichy agreed to allow Japan the use of several military and air bases in the colony. In return, Japan promised to respect the rights and interests of France in the Far East and particularly the territorial integrity of Indo-China. But the ink was hardly dry on that agreement before Indo-China was invaded by Japanese troops gathered in Kwangsi Province.

It is not clear whether this action was ordered by Tokyo or undertaken by the local Japanese forces. The uneasiness of the Japanese government suggests that the latter was probably the case. In any event, Japan has again violated its pledges. It has disrupted the Far Eastern status quo in an area of great strategic importance. Once in control of Indo-China, Japan would be able to carry on its war on China from the rear. It would also be within striking distance of the Dutch East Indies, thus threatening American sources of supply of rubber and tin.

Washington's Airport

It is a source of great satisfaction to Washingtonians that the city is soon to have one of the finest airports in the world. The excellent terminal now being rushed to completion at Gravelly Point will be the more keenly appreciated because the city has been for so long without a first-class landing field.

President Roosevelt is entitled to receive a large measure of the credit for this achievement when he lays the cornerstone of the Terminal Building today. It was he who finally ignored all the disputes over sites for the proposed airport and set aside public works funds for construction of the Gravelly Point project. For ten years preceding that action the acute need for an airport befitting the Nation's Capital had been recognized. But every definite proposal had been bogged down by controversy.

Since the present undertaking began, there has been a good deal of criticism because of its ambitious character. There was some fear that such a large and expensive air terminal could not be put to effective use. But with the intense development now in prospect for our aviation industry, those fears have disappeared.

Washington's interest in the project is likely to be demonstrated by a large attendance at the cornerstone-laying ceremony today. It is particularly fitting that the President should hold the spotlight in that ceremony today.

Signs From Germany

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Hitler's failure so far to make good his threat to destroy London and overthrow the British empire in a lightning attack, as he did Poland and France, is evidently causing much concern, not only in the minds of urban residents of the Reich, but quite generally throughout the country. They are naturally asking themselves (for of course they would not dare ask anyone else) not only why London is still on the map, but, since none of their cities were menaced during the last war and possessing a military machine more powerful than that of the Kaiser, with the addition of an inspired leader favored by all the Teutonic gods of Wagnerian opera, why Churchill's night pirates are allowed to force them to flee to damp and musty shelters at unseemly hours. Had they not been repeatedly told by the Fuehrer they would be free from attack and that the defenses of Berlin especially could not be breached.

The claims of the German high command that the present attacks on London are in reprisal for R. A. F. attacks on Berlin indicate a definite breakdown in the inventive branch of the German propaganda machine and does small credit to the intelligence of the average man on the street. In reprisal for what did the rotund air marshal's angels of death destroy Warsaw and Rotterdam and in the latter city cause death of thousands of noncombatants, men, women and children?

Germany's feelings are outraged at what it terms the wanton criminality of the British in their "savage attacks" on Berlin and in retaliation London is to be smashed into impotent ruins. It would appear that for a Junker plane to knock a corner off Buckingham Palace or to bowl over a statue of the revered Milton from its pedestal in a peaceful English churchyard is all right with the jovial Goering, but he is emotionally disturbed when an enemy bomb, as has been reported, topples a statue of Freedom from its perch atop the Brandenburg Gate, an inappropriate perch, by the way for such a sacred emblem in these days.

It is as apparent that the inhabitants of the Reich do not possess the intestinal stamina of the British as it is surprising that they should so naively proclaim their woeful lack of sporting blood before an appraising world.

Jefferson's Views

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In looking up the idea of a third term as expressed by Thomas Jefferson, we find, first, his principles prevented him from breaking the precedent of Washington. And in 1807 he wrote: "If some termination of the services of the Chif Magistrate be not fixed by the Constitution or supplied by practice, his office, nominally four years, will in fact become for life."

In 1809 Jefferson wrote: "No pretext should ever be permitted to dispense with it because there never will be a time when real difficulties will not exist and furnish a plausible pretext for dispensation."

And in 1813, our third President said: "I am for responsibilities at short periods, seeing neither reason nor safety in making public functionaries independent of the Nation for life, or even for a long term of years. On this principle I prefer the Presidential term of four years to that of seven years, which I myself had first suggested, annexing to it, however, ineligibility forever after; and I wish it were now annexed to the second quadrennial election of President."

Arms For Britain

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Undoubtedly many of your readers, aroused by the dispatches concerning the Battle of Britain, are asking: What can I do to help?

The American Committee for the Defense of British Homes offers an immediate answer—put a gun in the hands of an unarmed Briton to defend his home.

Reports from London reveal there is a great dearth of arms for male citizens. One great protection for Britain against invasion may be arms for the defense of British homes.

Any American who possesses a rifle, pistol, revolver, shotgun of 10 or 12-gage, or binoculars, which he wishes to donate for the defense of British homes, may forward such a gift to the American Committee for the Defense of British Homes, 10 Warren street, New York City N. Y. The committee will forward these arms to a civilian committee in England.

With invasion of Britain a momentary threat, here is one way in which Americans can help, and help before it is too late.

C. SUYDAM CUTTING.
Chairman, the American Committee for the Defense of British Homes.
New York City, Sept. 13.

That One Vote

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

When war comes, if it comes, whoever loves country more than self will say with Patrick Henry—"I regret I have but one life to give for my country." In war America will never lack for Patrick Henrys, but in this crisis, that is neither war nor peace, whom shall we choose to guide us.

Whoever hates the third term, the petty regimentations and inefficiencies of the New Deal and at the same time approves the courage and wisdom of Roosevelt, Hull, Stimson and Knox in our foreign affairs and dares not vote to upset our State Department, War Department and Navy Department in the midst of this war crisis, regrets with me that he has only one vote for his country.

It's a vain regret. The wisdom of Solomon will not avail us. We each have but one vote—it must be cast either for or against Roosevelt. There is no way to label it, as approving his foreign policy and disapproving his domestic policy.

If in this crisis we think the foreign policy is the more important and therefore vote for Roosevelt, we can only hope with the help of God and Congress Roosevelt can be made to see that our vote is merely a vote of confidence in his foreign policy—not of the third term, the New Deal and its regimentations.

HENRY E. COLTON.
Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 23.

"Mr. Roosevelt's Defense"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Your editorial in The Post of September 21, "Mr. Roosevelt's Defense," seems to have the fatal weakness of blinking facts. The University of Pennsylvania address was obviously directed at the Willkie charge that Roosevelt seeks to be a dictator. The attempted identification of the third term with dictatorship is curiously neglectful of actual events.

Leaving aside the usual misrepresentation of Jefferson's views, which in any case have little to do with the present job of stopping Hitler, it may be noted as a fact that Roosevelt represents the New Deal which, through methods that have been purely democratic, has been allowed by the House of Lords and the Hamiltonian Democrats to raise the joint national income by some 75 per cent. Unless all signs fail, the war spending, just as in 1917 to '19, will add another 30 billions to joint income spent and made. A general raise of 40 per cent is in sight.

As the campaign progresses, and Willkie talks, it becomes clearer every day that it has been put up to the American people to decide whether the New Deal represented by Roosevelt and Wallace is to have a third term.

If this be dictatorship, make the most of it!

RICHARD FRANCHOT.
Washington, Sept. 23.

Pennsylvania Address

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

President Roosevelt's reference at the University of Pennsylvania to free elections may impress the unthinking but certainly not those of us who are familiar with New Deal politics.

Certainly there was nothing "free" about the late Democratic Convention. Quite the opposite! Indeed, it was perhaps the most perfect one-man show ever staged in the history of American politics. Would men of the caliber of Washington and Jefferson have sanctioned such proceedings? That such a sad travesty on true Democratic principles should have been enacted is exceedingly regrettable, to speak mildly.

Old line Democrats—and there are quite a few of us left—are of the opinion that it is high time Mr. Roosevelt practiced what he preached, otherwise Mr. Willkie's chances will be tremendously enhanced.

EDMUND K. GOLDSBOROUGH.
Washington, Sept. 22.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Mr. Roosevelt's warning in his Philadelphia address against rule by a "few at the top," and his declaration that the safeguard to the American heritage of freedom lies in free and unhampered elections, is important and true. Is Mr. Roosevelt consistent and are these declarations consistent with the facts of recent history?

It is well known that members of Congress who are now backing and pushing and clamoring for a third term for Mr. Roosevelt were chosen for their responsibile positions not only by a minority of the voters in the respective districts but, in some instances, by a percentage as small as 10, and 5 and some by as few as 3 per cent of the electors of their districts.

The conclusive inference is that those voting were a "few at the top." It appears that one man has "dared to run the gantlet" of such elections.

Sea-Swept Hatteras

DOWN BELOW Kitty Hawk on the North Carolina coast is the sandy elbow of Cape Hatteras—a sort of sea-girt Sahara of white dunes and bright sun in summer, broken by the blackened timbers of old shipwrecks and driftwood.

Cape Hatteras points to sea as Hatteras Island swings wide of the green-jungled Carolina coastline. The island is part of a sandy seawall that curves along the Atlantic Coast and where a strange and friendly Old English people win their living from the sea. The seawaves sparkle and hiss along the sallow sands for miles while eastward the waters of the Pamlico riffle under the bright sun. Far across the sunlit sound, the islanders may always see the swamp-green line of the real coast.

The waves tear away at the sand endlessly, and then build again while atop the shifting and sea-threatened bar the people group in little fisher-villages, and grow what they can in the sandy soil. Why they came there out of the cloud of some colonial day, no one knows. Why they stay there, no one can guess—unless it be because a people grown up by the splashing ocean and the white sand and the blue waters cannot content themselves digging in the red inland earth, or beneath the green inland trees.

At Hatteras, one may fancy stubbing a toe on the brass-bound corner of some old half-buried box of gold and broken jewelry. Blackbeard or the old bold mate of Henry Morgan may walk along the moonlit beach at night wearing a three-cornered hat and carrying a brace of antique pistols. The moon shines brightly downward on the sea through whispy clouds while little sea-creatures—the quick in the waves and the dead on the sands—glow back like phosphorous. For miles, no trace of people may be seen save a Coast Guard tower—unmanned by lookout in this day of wireless—or the shadow of a village church-steeple, high and safe, far within the island.

HERE AND THERE the sea tears its way through the sandy breakwater to fill the shallow and lake-like basin of Pamlico Sound, and there where the sea sucks and swirls about the inlets the people mark the island divisions. The names of the broken inlets and the wind-swept sea-lands swirl down the coast in a misty wedding of the old Indian and old English—Croatan, Oregon, Ocreecoke and Hatteras; Avon, Rodanthe and Buxton.

Strange spiders spin thick webs at the edges and nooks of old cisterns. An army of sand-dwelling crabs swarms a million miles daily up and down the wave-swept beaches. The hoofs of wild horses beat upon the shore and in the lonely places a herd may thunder by, snorting, with tangled manes flying in the wind.

The shy, stiff-legged sandpiper plays inland and near the Pamlico salt marshes. Clouds of mosquitoes swirl about every newcomer and light by the hundreds upon his clothes to seek a drop of blood. The knightly black and yellow wasp, girt with his poison-tipped long sword, circles in the air but with surprising amiability. And everywhere the sea-waves pound in from distant shores and nearby shoals, carrying to the beach the broken bits of shipping, the black carcases of foreign beetles, a piece of boat, perhaps, and the driftwood of the four corners and the seven seas.

ABOUT A DOZEN families came to stay at Hatteras sometime in the early history of the New World. Their children remain today on the sandy ridge and in the little villages. They bear names that may have come from Devonshire and they speak a soft English tongue that summons the foggy isles of Britain for a moment into the Carolina sun. Tales in this seaside desert land still are told of the mysterious colony of Sir Walter Raleigh that vanished into the New World jungle at the beginning of the seventeenth century. The first white child of the New World—Virginia Dare—still may hold the secret of the Carolina seaside outposts.

Meanwhile, the gulls cry and the sandpipers play while a Government plane swoops down to a makeshift landing field bearing a soil conservation man from Washington. The crabs scuttle about the shore while an auto whirls down the hard-packed ocean wash at ebb tide. Hatteras highways are limited to an occasional bridge or ferry and the smooth hard sand when the tide recedes.

The waves race in again at the flow, sparkle-tipped in the sun and white-capped by the wind, while Pamlico lies, blue and rippling, across the sandy ridge. The people of Hatteras live in the broken rhythm of seaside dwellings in the sun and the sand, swept by the rain and the cold wet sea wind. The people who came from Devon live on the sandy breakwater always within sight of a greener coastline across the fish-laden sound.

ANGUS CORLEY.

On Indispensability

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The works of Shakespeare, always a fruitful source of comment capable of application to current events, may be searched in vain for anything more apropos than the following, from Julius Caesar, anent the "doctrine of indispensability:"

"Upon what meat doth this our Caesar feed,
That he is grown so great? Age, thou art shamed!
Rome, thou hast lost a breed of noble bloods!
When went there by an age, since the great flood,
But it was famed with more than with one man?
When could they say till now that talked of Rome
That her wide walls encompassed but one man?"

These remarks, it will be recalled, are in connection with the "draft" of Caesar for emperor by his friend Marc Anthony, a toga which, however, was "thrice offered" and "thrice refused."

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

II. The Example Of England

IT IS CLEAR by now that as the war goes on, the issues in it change. This is true of Great Britain. It is also true for Germany.

This column believes that the most important things in this world happen in men's minds, and that what happens in men's minds will, in the long run, determine the outcome on the field of battle.

The greatest weakness of the Allied cause at the outbreak of war was that it was fought for the maintenance of a status quo which progressive minds in all countries had already rejected as untenable. The greatest weakness of the German campaign was, and is, that the Nazis fight for a new order which is oppressive and preposterous.

The greatest need of this campaign is, for greater clarity regarding its objectives.

The greatest cause for hope is that objectives are emerging not according to blueprints and ideologies but out of the realities which the war reveals.

EUROPE, and the world, at the beginning of this war, were in a condition of political and economic anarchy. Europe was a congeries of small sovereign states separated from one another by rigid political and economic walls. The emergence of Fascism separated them farther into ideologies.

After the last war the United States had carried the process of political and economic secession still farther by a policy of political isolationism, more rigid restriction of immigration and the setting up of the highest tariff in our history.

The League of Nations soon demonstrated that a political confederation which left intact the complete national sovereignty of every state was as certain to fail as was the confederation of the Thirteen American Colonies previous to the establishment of real federation under the Constitution. Before the European war began, and in the first crucial tests—Manchukuo and Ethiopia—the the League, already bereft of some of its members, had broken down.

IN 1929 this already weak and tottering structure was shaken by a world-wide financial collapse, followed by a profound economic depression which let loose revolutionary forces in all countries.

For this collapse occurred in a world in which science and technology had released unprecedented productive capacity, knowledge of which had percolated down to the last sweating worker or dole collector in every Western land. A substandard of living, varying in size and extremity in various countries, prevailed everywhere for a certain fraction of the population.

Not this fact alone, but the conviction that it was unnecessary, was the basis of the popular revolt. Among all except those who had not personally suffered and were deficient in imagination a mental revolt occurred against "the system"—or rather, against the lack of any system.

THE REVOLT occurred earlier or later most virulently in those countries that had suffered most from the war and its aftermath—in Italy and Germany, both of which had had a taste of bolshevism and a strong dose of inflation.

A revolutionary condition was therefore everywhere latent. in the United States it was diverted by the New Deal. In France it found no clear expression but revealed itself through embittered and impotent political controversy.

In England, under a decade of Tory government, it was kept in more or less sullen check by progressively increasing social services which did not get at the root of any problem, which were a drain on the existing economy and which made the burden of armaments for defense a threat to the whole economy as it was organized.

WHEN GERMANY broke out into National Socialism, the greatest and most widespread error, sedulously cultivated by the Nazis themselves, was to regard it wholly as a counter-revolutionary movement.

It was this misconception that led to a serious underrating of its power which lay in the fact that it was riding a revolutionary wave.

Hitler himself was carried by this wave. There is nothing in "Mein Kampf," in the field of economics and sociology, that would not be acceptable to an American Republican. To be sure, the famous 14 points of the National Socialist program formulated a revolt against the banks and against the concentration of industry; they have some resemblance to American Populism.

They were addressed primarily to a disgruntled and impoverished lower middle class. They were never realized.

The Hitler movement started as a pan-German revival, and as such it received its first support from the Reichswehr, which throughout the republic, was secretly arming and, through hidden funds, secretly subsidizing "patriotic" societies.

But, once in power, National Socialism found itself riding the revolutionary wave. Like all tyrants, who were ably advised centuries ago by Machiavelli, Hitler found that he must base his power on the masses, and he did so by the accepted formula of terror in one hand and a gift in the other.

Rapidly the two most powerful elements in the Nazi setup became the Gestapo (which, among other things, has established a sort of block-by-block Gallup poll as a current and continual check on public sentiment) and the Labor Front, which became progressively radical.

SUBTLY, then, and bit by bit, The Nazi military program, in the propaganda attending it, threw off the pan-German emphasis and presented itself as the "liberator" of Europe and the harbinger of socialism and political unity.

The campaign against communism became, in the twinkling of an eye after the signing of the Russo-German pact, a campaign against the "pluto" democracies, and in this campaign the Nazis were not in the least averse to taking over the frustrated hopes of "crackpot" liberals and presenting themselves as the would-be creators of a United States of Europe.

Now, of course, there is a profound and insoluble paradox in the Nazi opportunism.

You cannot base a United States of Europe on tyranny and on the doctrine of racial superiority. One or the other has to go into the ash can. You cannot convince the Poles, the Czechs, the Norwegians or the Dutch that they have been "liberated."

But now a new tactic asserts itself. It is whispered around that "Hitler is not immortal. His regime is not immortal. He will bring about the unity of Europe and the unity of the whole world. Then, with the end of world anarchy, a new age of freedom and democracy will dawn."

WHAT WILL dawn will be the greatest system of monopolistic state capitalism that the human mind can conceive, with all Europe organized like a gigantic Ford factory, and by sheer monopolistic economic power putting the screws on everyone, including us.

But the whispering campaign goes on among the masses in all countries and it is effective. Nothing the Nazis could do would be more effective.

THE GREATEST allies of that campaign are and have been the status quo supporters—those, unfortunately, in positions of influence and power in all countries—who cannot conceive any better political organization of the world than that of circa 1919, nor of any better economic organization of the world than that of circa 1929. These oppose the Nazi fake revolution, which, nevertheless, has shrewdly exploited the latent discontent, by a counter-revolution which the intelligence of the world rejects.

Deficient in imagination, desperately hanging onto what they have, nostalgically yearning for a status quo which has been exploding for ten years all over the place, these, whether they are American isolationists, or British elder statesmen, or French "safety-first" retreaters, creep into air shelters which they have built in their minds, and hope with not a shred of reason, that they will somehow keep the best of all possible worlds.

These have been the capitalists in all countries who could not see that capitalism based on free enterprise is a world-wide system, incompatible in the long run with international political anarchy and economic nationalism.

These have been the politicians who have half-heartedly armed nations to fight for yesterday instead of tomorrow.

This is the mentality which loses wars by losing its grip on all the vital forces that believe in the future, not in the past.

That mentality wrecked France and almost destroyed Britain. Now, in Britain, a great change is taking place. It is that change which may make it possible to draw victory out of defeat.

Fair Enough

Nelson's Effrontery

Chicago, Sept. 24.

I HAVE NEVER met a more authentic specimen of the labor skate who fattens on organized labor in the role of political patron than Oscar F. Nelson, a judge of the Superior Court of Cook County, who has the effrontery not only to sit in judgment on the fate and fortunes of other men but to present himself as a candidate for the office of public prosecutor.

Ordinarily the public outside Chicago would have no interest in a contest for the office of State's attorney here, for which the judge is now a candidate. But in this case the circumstances compel wider attention, for organized labor in Chicago has been deviled and bled by racketeers of the criminal underworld as nowhere else in the country, and yet this judge, himself identified with evil interlopers, is campaigning as one who would "drive out all the undesirables who seek to fasten themselves upon labor organizations."

I call attention to the fact that I write not on hearsay but on information. I interviewed this judge for almost two hours in an office which he occupies in the suite of the law firm which still holds the account of the flat janitors' union, a subsidiary of the malodorous International Union of Building Service Employes.

HE FORMERLY was a partner in this firm, but claims that he has dissociated himself for the duration of his term on the bench. I hope he is more truthful in that statement than in other declarations which he made to me.

One statement I have already disposed of, that his firm got only a little more than $10,000 a year from the janitors during the 12-year period from 1923 to 1925, when he represented these toilers officially. The proposition that this relatively small union required even that much legal service, including service of its individual members, if the union and the members were reasonably well behaved, I need not discuss. It is his proposition, and I will leave it where Nelson flang it.

But, confronted the next day with the fact that this union regularly collected an assessment of $2 per member per quarter for legal services, Judge Nelson admitted that this had been so, that his firm got "part" of this kitty, amounting, "at times" to $30,000 a year, and that one year the firm's rakeoff was $42,000.

This judge has worked the union appeal for political advantage and financial profit for many years. He has been a vice president of the Chicago Federation of Labor for a quarter of a century and has exploited his connections in politics.

IN THE SAME interview Judge Nelson denied to me that his secretary had taken the minutes of the executive meeting in 1937, at which a mob of New York and Chicago hoodlums took over the presidency of the building service employes by electing to that office George Scalise—the white slaver and inveterate racketeer who recently was convicted of robbing the union treasury. He admitted that the minutes were taken by a young woman employed by the law firm, but said she was not his secretary any more and was not his secretary at the time she took the minutes. Yet twice in the course of our conversation this person entered the room where we were sitting and performed secretarial duties for him.

Judge Nelson also denied that he had served as counsel for the building service union and said he knew Scalise only slightly.

On September 7 the Chicago Tribune quoted him as saying he never received a single fee from Scalise's union, which would suggest that he never represented the organization, and on September 20 the Chicago Daily News said he flatly denied that he ever was connected with the building service employes.

BY WAY OF COMMENT on the truth of his statements I now quote from a greeting from Judge Nelson published in the official ballyhoo journal of the Scalise racketeers in its first issue, August 1, 1938, when he was on the bench.

"I hasten to extend my greetings, congratulations and good wishes to General President Scalise, to his fellow officers of the international union and to the new journal," Judge Nelson wrote.

And, again recalling his denial that he ever was counsel for the international, note this closing sentence of his greeting:

"Because of the many years that I served as the attorney for the Building Service Employes International Union and the part I had in its beginning, I shall always be particularly interested."

This from the man who says he would "drive out all the undesirables who seek to fasten themselves upon labor organizations."

Two-Layer Pension

By Ernest K. Lindley

The President's New Proposal

ONLY PASSING ATTENTION seems to have been given by the press and by political leaders to an extremely important proposal made by the President in his address to the teamsters' union two weeks ago. This proposal was that the social insurance system be expanded and improved "in the near future."

The President suggested, in particular, the creation of a two-layer old-age pension system. The lower layer would be a basic flat pension paid to every needy man and woman on reaching the retirement age. The upper layer would be the additional pension bought or earned by the worker through his contributions to the old-age security fund. The former would be sufficient to buy the bare necessities. The latter would enable the worker to enjoy a few of the amenities of life in his old age.

As briefly outlined in his speech, the President's old-age pension proposal may have seemed to many to be no different from the pension system which we now have. We already have a pension which is supposed to provide the bare necessities of life for the needy aged. This is the old-age assistance system, the cost of which is divided between the Federal Government and the States. In addition we already have a separate system of old-age benefits financed by the pay-roll tax on certain workers and their employers. This latter system also pays benefits to the wives, widows, children and certain other dependents of insured workers.

AT PRESENT, however, these two systems do not benefit the same people. The insured workers and their wives are supposed to be taken care of by their system. The separate systems of old-age assistance is intended for the old people who are not insured. The insured workers get their benefits as a matter of right. The uninsured old people do not get their assistance unless they can show that they need it. Generally speaking, the test of need is rather strict. And in many States the monthly sum given as assistance to the aged is pitifully small. This is especially true in some of the Southern States in which large percentages of the old people are needy and most of the aging workers are in agriculture and other uninsured occupations. Already hard-pressed by the burden of educating a disproportionate share of the Nation's children and of financing other essential social services, some of these States simply do not have the wealth and income to provide adequate assistance for the aged.

What some of the higher New Dealers have in mind—and what the President was hinting at—is to improve the old-age assistance system and slide it under the insurance system. One suggestion for improving the old-age assistance system is to relax the means test, or proof of need, and the requirement that the States match the Federal payment. It is assumed that the wealthier States—generally those with high costs of living also—would continue to match, or add to, the basic Federal payment. This basic Federal payment would be received also by uninsured workers without other substantial resources, and on top of it the insured workers would receive the benefits earned by the regular contributions from their pay checks.

THE EVENTUAL RESULT of such a system might well be a basic subsistence payment to every citizen of 65 years or older, in addition to which he would get his earned insurance annuities. The President did not suggest for the near future a system quite so comprehensive, however, as he coupled "needy man or woman" with his proposed minimum pension.

Wendell Willkie apparently did not entirely overlook the President's pension proposal, for he was reported to have commented on it adversely at one press conference, on the ground that the Government's resources had to be conserved for national defense. Shortly afterward, Dr. Francis E. Townsend declared his support of Willkie.

Two years ago the President's pension proposal and Dr. Townsend's declaration would have stirred a torrent of comment. But the elderly doctor's interest in pensions seems to have waned with his political influence, and the plight of the aged can no longer compete in the headlines and editorial columns with the plight of London and the British empire, and the problems of our military defense.

The President's proposal is in thorough accord with two beliefs firmly held by him and his chief advisers. The first is that the strengthening of democracy at home must go forward side by side with the strengthening of our defenses against attack. The second is that our resources, if properly managed, are great enough to rearm the Nation and at the same time to provide for a moderate increase in the average standard of living.

French Far East Case

Envoy Accuses Japan

JAPANESE VIOLATION of signed agreements was blamed by French Ambassador Gaston Henri-Haye yesterday for "serious" clashes between Japanese and French armed forces in Indo-China.

At a press conference called especially by him to make it clear that France, though sorely wounded by the German invasion, has no intention of surrendering her rights in the Far East without a struggle, the Ambassador accused the Japanese of attempting to obtain more than allowed by terms of agreement signed with the French, Sunday.

He said Japanese troops attempted to enter parts of Indo-China not covered by the agreement. Although Gen. Nishihara, the Japanese commander, gave the order to cease firing yesterday after "our troops succeeded in breaking the assault," the Ambassador reported the presence of warship-convoyed barges as indicating "that an attempt to disembark at Doson is being prepared."

HENRI-HAYE EMPHASIZED repeatedly that France, in resisting Japan both with troops and by achieving a two-thirds reduction in Tokyo's original demands for concessions in her war with China, has always stood alone. This strengthened the conclusion of some observers that events in Indo-China have reached the point where only active assistance of the French by the United States can maintain much longer the status quo in the Far East.

Secretary Hull declared that formulation of policies or steps to be taken in view of Japan's southward empire movement must await more factual information on developments in Indo-China. He declined to discuss the possibility of American aid to French forces or to say whether an American protest had been or would be made at Tokyo.

The Secretary declared, however, that he had heard no official intimation that a part of the United States fleet now at Hawaii might be transferred to the Far East.

The Japanese Embassy last night declined an immediate reply to the French envoy's charge of agreement violation pending a study of the text of Henri-Haye's prepared statement. Akira Miyasaki, embassy secretary, referred to advices from Tokyo, which said the fighting was due to a misunderstanding of the terms of the agreement on the part of the French, a misunderstanding, it was added, that "naturally has been dispelled."

A few hours before calling reporters to the embassy, Henri-Haye had called at the State Department for a conference with Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles. Welles, the Ambassador said, sympathetically received his explanation of the need for France's signing the agreement. He affirmed the department's denial, published with Secretary Hull's declaration Monday that the Japanese were upsetting the status quo in Indo-China, that the American Government had approved the agreement.

"Notwithstanding the enormous difficulties which the French government now encounters and the fact that no outside help has been forthcoming from any country, my government, for the last two months, has been resisting with increased energy the Japanese demands which were presented as early as last July with a character of urgency taking the form of an injunction and even an ultimatum," the Ambassador declared.

HENRI-HAYE SAID the French agreed to the billeting of 6,000 Japanese troops in Indo-China in the face of Japanese demands for 25,000, and to the Japanese use of three airdromes when six were requested.

Reduction of Japanese demands was accomplished, the Ambassador declared, "through our will, always affirmed, to resist by force of arms, in case the terms of the agreement were violated."

Henri-Haye emphasized that France, though vanquished in Europe, means, if necessary, to fight a new foe in the East, by declaring:

"We have had enough of miserable experiences."

Referring to the precarious position of his government since the end of the war with Germany, the Ambassador added:

"If we had been like we used to be, the concessions (to Japan) would not have been made at all."

Two-Ocean Threat

By Barnet Nover

Interrelated Wars

FOR A PROPER understanding of what is going on in the world, it must not be forgotten for a moment that the war in Europe and the struggle in Asia are not isolated and unrelated developments. On the contrary, they spring from the same source, follow the same pattern, exhibit the same characteristics. And they interact on each other endlessly and constantly.

What began on the dust-blown plains of Manchuria nine years ago has reached its apogee in the nightly horrors visited on London. Because France is prostrate and Great Britain fighting for her life, the Japanese are today moving into Indo-China and may tomorrow or next month or next year attempt the conquest of the Netherlands East Indies.

We understand now, far better than we did in 1936 or 1938 or 1939, that every victory won by Hitler is a threat to our security and our civilization. It is equally true, although many Americans still fail to realize it, that victories won by Japan are no less a danger to us.

INDO-CHINA is a far-away country, well off the beaten track. Yet what is happening there today may affect the lives and fortunes of every American. For the course of aggression in Asia, as the course of aggression in Europe and Africa, has no visible limit.

Nine years ago there were those who argued that Japan's expansionist appetite would be satisfied with that large morsel known as Manchuria, a region as large as prewar France and Germany combined. It was not. It never could be. Japan's appetite grew with the eating. So has Germany's. So has Italy's. So may it be with Russia, now that she, too, has embarked on a career of conquest.

AMERICANS are very much alarmed, and rightly so, over the possibility of Great Britain being defeated. For without the British fleet as a buffer between this hemisphere and Hitler the nations of the New World would be in deadly peril. Years will elapse, it will be recalled, before the United States acquires that two-ocean navy which has just been authorized. In the meantime we are faced by a two-ocean menace.

To meet that menace some favor a policy of appeasement toward Japan. They would have us purchase Japanese good will in the way Messrs. Chamberlain and Daladier purchased German good will, with China in the role of Czecho-Slovakia. But the results would in all probability be equally disastrous.

THE OPPOSITE and wiser course would be to oppose Japan as we are opposing Hitler, by aiding those actually fighting the aggressor. In the latter case it is Britain, whose stout resistance in the face of fearful punishment has aroused the admiration of the world. But the Chinese have been resisting their aggressors even longer and in the face of even greater odds. Having lost the whole of their eastern seaboard, their principal cities, most of their railroad lines, they moved west and have continued their resistance from that point. And as long as they fight on there is little we have to fear from Japan.

It is wholly to our advantage, therefore, to help the Chinese as we are helping the British. The longer the Chinese fight the less we will have to worry about the Far East; if they win, we can devote all our attention to the menace from the Atlantic side.

JAPAN'S INVASION of Indo-China has many facets. In part it is a manifestation of an insatiable urge for conquest. In part it is the expression of an old and never abandoned policy of southward expansion which began with the annexation of Formosa in 1895 and has gone on side by side with Japan's effort to establish her hegemony over China.

What is of immediate significance is that the occupation of Indo-China would enable Japan to attack the armies of Chiang Kai-shek from far closer range than has been possible during the last two years. It would also make possible the permanent closure of the Burma Road, the last remaining artery connecting China with the overseas world.

THE FRENCH forces in Indo-China show signs of resisting the Japanese. For how long and how successfully they can do so is not clear. They are cut off from France. They have only limited supplies. They lack air power. Nonetheless they might make it difficult for the invaders, particularly since the Japanese already have their hands full in China.

Should Japan nonetheless succeed in overrunning the colony her position vis-a-vis China would be strengthened. Furthermore, Indo-China could serve as a useful base of operations against the Dutch East Indies.

At the moment Japan has nothing to fear from France. She has little to fear from Great Britain. The only nation she is afraid of is the United States. For through the exercise of economic power which until now we have carefully avoided using against Japan, we could enormously increase the difficulties in the way of the island empire's aggressive course. In so doing we would be defending vital interests which we can neglect only at very great peril.

Big Orient Crop Is New Blow to U. S. Leaf Trade

By the Associated Press

Further losses of American export tobacco markets were forseen by the Agriculture Department yesterday in advices from the Orient that China, Manchuria and the Japanese Empire had produced a record crop of 317,000,000 pounds of flue-cured tobacco.

The department said that this crop, combined with carry-overs somewhat larger than a year ago, indicate a substantial decrease in imports of American leaf and stem by the Orient in the 1940-41 season.

During the 1939-40 season, such imports amounted to 75,000,000 pounds, all of it to China. Chinese imports during the 1940-41 season are not expected by the department to exceed 55,000,000 pounds. The Japanese government has maintained an embargo against imports of American leaf during the past two years.

The European war has virtually shut off American tobacco exports to that continent and has greatly reduced shipments to the United Kingdom, long this Nation's No. 1 foreign tobacco buyer.

Architect Visions $15,000,000 City of Future on Temple Heights

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Breathing his same old defiance of the conventional, Frank Lloyd Wright paused in Washington for a few hours yesterday to deliver a descriptive preview of what may prove to be his life's masterpiece—Crystal City.

Crystal City is his name for a self-contained community of hotel, apartments, theater, shops, ballroom, cocktail lounge and garages, which the celebrated 71-year-old architect is planning to raise on what is now known as Temple Heights, the 10-acre wooded site at Connecticut and Florida avenues.

"But it will not be built" on "the heights," comes Wright's correction. "Rather, it will be" of "the heights."

Those three words, "of the heights," just about explain what the white-haired, precedent-hating architect means when he says Crystal City will be "organic" in design. Its towers, theater, driveways, and the rest, will be fused with the landscape, rather than be imposed upon it.

At a press conference in the 1643 Connecticut avenue offices of the syndicate promoting the $15,000,000 project, Wright lived up splendidly to his reputation as an artist with a devastating tongue for that which offends his reasoning faculty.

Modernism in structural design he deprecated as an "unfortunate abuse" of the organic architecture which he espouses.

Discussing Washington's appearance, he was more restrained than formerly. Visiting here a few years ago, he said the Capital's "aggregation of buildings is not so far removed from what its traffic system is." Yesterday he simply muttered something under his breath about "commonplace elegance" and let it go at that.

Wright (left) discusses perspectives with Roy S. Thurman, of the syndicate which is promoting the $15,000,000 enterprise planned for Temple Heights, whose name will be changed to Crystal Heights, at Connecticut and Florida avenues

"Ah, women's clothes of today are in sympathy with my line of philosophy," he responded. "Free and easy and practical. But not men's clothes. Bags for the legs, bags for the arms, bags for the body. Bags, bags, bags."

Wright's Crystal City on—rather, of—Crystal Heights will, he thinks, help dispel the "cultural lag" which not only Washington but the whole country is suffering. This is the way he describes it:

"The dwellings will be Usonian. Samuel Butler used that word, remember? There will be some 2,500 dwelling units divided among the hotel and the apartment building. What you will have is 21 buildings in one. As the land rises and falls, so will the 21 parts vary in heights.

"Crystal City will have all the virtues of standardization but none of its drawbacks."

"It will also have," Roy S. Thurman, head of the sponsoring syndicate, put in at this point, "a big cocktail lounge."

"And a ballroom large enough for 1,000 couples," added the architect, continuing:

"The buildings will be earthquake-proof, fireproof and vermin-proof. Yes, and they'll be a poor bomb target because the tops will be tapering, presenting comparatively little surface."

One of Wright's most famous works is the Imperial Hotel in Tokyo, which withstood the disastrous earthquake of 1923.

Nearly every dwelling unit will have its own fireplace—"a real one, not painted on the wall"—and balcony. There'll be no such thing as ordinary windows. Structural glass will be used extensively, obviating such prosaic utilities as those.

The financing syndicate, whose membership has not been divulged, is now in the process of purchasing Temple Heights from the Masonic order. According to Wright, plans and construction specifications will be completed in three months and the groundbreaking will take place soon thereafter.

The architect made it clear that the famous Treaty Oak, as well as the other handsome arboreal specimens on the grounds, will not be disturbed.

"In fact, the Treaty Oak will be the central feature of one of the terraces," he said.

Wright left for New York yesterday afternoon to prepare for his one-man show which opens at the Museum of Modern Art in November. From there he will return to his studio, "Taliesin," at Spring Green, Wis. There work his apprentices, some 36 of them, who are being schooled in "organic architecture."

Literature On the March

FIVE THOUSAND books went on a march through streets of southwest Washington yesterday, as pupils of Jefferson Junior High School transferred them from the old building to the new one, six blocks away.

The students' share in the move started the day before, when they trundled 900 dictionaries and 500 spellers between buildings. A lot of learning was in transit, at that moment, but the students weren't over-serious about it. They took the chore merrily, considering it a part of the celebration of opening a new building.

Yesterday morning, the approximately 680 students reported to the old building at Sixth and D streets southwest to receive their textbooks, stored there. Loading up with seven or eight books apiece, the students headed—class by class—for the new building, Eighth and H streets. As books and youngsters settled simultaneously in the new quarters, Jefferson Junior High School was ready for business.

These Are the Simple Classic Hats Men Say They Prefer

For the dashing type of girl who can wear her hat with an air and at an angle is the brown fedora felt above. It has a bold ly curled up brim on one side and on the other a saucy upstart quill. Can go anywhere.

For the tailored girl who yet doesn't scorn an attention-getting device is the naive soldier blue felt above. It has a mushroom brim and a military insignia above the hatband. Suitable for business or pleasure.

Tailored, Not 'Fancy' Headgear Appeals to the Masculine Eye

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor

ARE you wavering between a fussy fall bonnet and a good sensible one?

If so, forget it and let the men—not your conscience—decide.

The fact that men really do have feelings, and strong ones, about the hats we wear, was brought to our attention by Howard Hagen, a Washington man who has styled and bought hats for women of every age, facial structure and type for a score of years. Although Mr. Hagen has a goodly supply of "fancy" hats at a local millinery department, he feels that men have been responsible for getting women into the neater, simpler hats they are now clamoring for.

"After last spring's frenzy of 'cuckoo' headgear," he said, "the men had to militarize in revolt to get the hats they really like women to wear."

"What do men want women to wear?" he was asked.

"Hats that are trim and neat, that make women look both well collected and feminine, not too silly nor frivilous, not too showy; Hats that permit you to see a woman's face and head structure, instead of concealing them behind veils, frou-frou or chicanery—in short, the tailored classic, timeless felt."

When asked if both the wearer and escort wouldn't get a trifle weary of the "timeless classic," Mr. Hagen said that for over a month he had been taking a poll on the hats men compliment or comment upon.

"They are always the simple, casual, unconspicuous sports or quiet dress felts," he reported. "The classic felt doesn't limit a hat to merely a little round 'roller.'"

To prove that every woman, regardless of age or face, can wear a classic felt, Mr. Hagen listed the following silhouettes best suited to each type.

If your face is short and round, wear a Breton sailor with one brim curled high to give piquancy to your features.

If you're angular and sharp nosed, wear a postillion shape with brim dipped over one eye and a crisp nose veil to soften high cheek bones.

If your face is square and hard in contour, wear a profile hat with one brim swooping entirely over the "worst" side of your face, and a tall quill to give length to your square jaw.

If your face is a pretty oval, uniform in structure, wear a snap brimmed felt far back on the forehead or "straight" to enhance your even proportions.

And if you wear glasses, wear a rather large brim or visor, perhaps sugar-scoop in shape, tilted slightly to offset too severe a line.

The Figure Is Narrow—With Curves

Sheath-Like Styles For Fall Demand Plenty of Exercise

By Ida Jean Kain

NOW THAT American designers are having their fling at fashion, it looks as though the American woman will be compelled to live up to her reputation of having the best figure in the world.

The fall silhouette is narrow with curves accented from bosom to hips—and the figure had better be good! Bosoms are still high, waistlines still nipped in, but a new and daring departure is the ellipygian effect.

To wear these sheath-like styles with the requisite dash, a three-point exercise program will be needed. To begin with, here is a shoulder-jerker that will lift the bosom and perk up the posture:

Waistline Bender

Flex the arms shoulder-level with elbows straight out at the sides and hands in front of the chest. Using the muscles of the shoulders, jerk sharply backward. Continue for 25 jerks, rest, shake the tension out of arms and shoulders; and then perform another 25 counts.

Do this waistline bender to slim the line from ribs to hips: Stand on the right knee on the floor, with left leg stretched straight out at the side, foot resting on floor. Begin with arms stretched overhead. Slowly bend to the left, sliding the left hand down the outstretched leg to the ankle and arcing the right arm overhead. Grasp the ankle and pull! Return to beginning-position, relax, stretch, and bend again. Repeat four times, then perform while standing on left knee, with right leg stretched straight out at the side. This is one of the most thorough-going exercises you will find for slimming the torso.

To firm and flatten the derriere do a semiroll with an extra twist for the waistline. Lie on the back on the floor, legs together and straight up in the air at a right angle to the trunk. Try to keep shoulders flat on the floor as you roll hips over to one side, resting legs on the floor. Swing legs up in air again, roll back across the hips and over to opposite side. The rolling firms the hips and by keeping the shoulders on the floor you give the waist a twist. The right angle of hips and trunk tones the muscles of the abdominal wall.

Trim Waist Gives Dash

There is no reason why you should not have a brand-new figure to go with your fall clothes. And you will be delighted with the dash that a trim waist and smooth hipline give your budget frocks!

Wool Jersey Popular For Many Dress Styles

Wool jersey is one of the pets of this season and is a definitely established fabric. It has been stocked and advertised already in casual dresses and used in a slim silhouette model with a wide pleated band at the edge of the skirt, giving room for movement. College girls like it for campus and date dresses, and in more sophisticated versions a very fine black wool jersey is used for shirred and draped types with turbans to match.

Because of this soft draping quality, we also find many stunning evening costumes in jersey. It is a perfect fabric for negligees and house coats and also appears in full-trousered pajama suits for lounging.

A WOMAN'S WASHINGTON

By JEAN BROWNELL

Corinne Marshall Tells About Her Passion for Building Homes

"If I stay anywhere over the week-end I always want to build a house," says Corinne Griffith Marshall. She and her husband, owner of the Washington Redskins, had lived in an apartment here several years when one day she pointed out the window and remarked, "Let's build by that clump of trees." The result is the home at 2801 Rock Creek drive, an unusual one-story house encircled by shrubbery so skillfully that one sees neither the road nor the neighbors. Small but spacious, it has no guest room—a feature she recommends to Washington home owners.

Mrs. Marshall

The house is painted in four shades of gray, inside and out. "That made it easy for the painters," she explains. "I merely had to say, "This room is to be shade No. 1." It's restful, too; as you go from one room to another there are no tiring contrasts. And it makes a splendid background for colored evening dresses!" Furniture upholstered in beige and cream fabrics carries out the neutral effect.

A dark carpeting, inexpensive but durable, covers every inch of floor space as protection against children (two adopted daughters) and dogs (a daschund and a boxer). The little girls have their own suite—bedroom, bath and glassed-in play porch; "they spend most of their time in THAT, however," she says ruefully, indicating a pup tent erected on the lawn.

SHOPPING AROUND—A New York firm manufactures a salad dressing described on the label as "a recipe used by an old Virginia family"; its trade name is "You-All" . . . Sign on a Georgetown grocery reflecting the war influence: "Chicklings and watermelons."

Summer residents of Blowing Rock, N. C., cooperate in raising funds for lunches to be served during the winter to the mountain children who attended the village school. A Washington woman, Mrs. W. Wayne Wirgman, of 4300 Hawthorne street northwest, takes part in the project by doing horoscopes and turning her fees over to the fund. This summer, she says, she startled the local pastor by telling him he had injured his knees as a young man. "How did you know I broke both kneecaps playing college football?" he asked her.

Two girl admirers of Ralph Richardson, the English movie star, had paid homage to their hero at the Little, where he is appearing in "The Fugitive," and were exchanging impressions over a sandwich in a Ninth street restaurant afterward. One said, "Isn't it strange that we can get excited over such an unromantically baldish man?" The waiter, who had been hovering nearby unnoticed, remarked at the point, "Sure am glad I'm not bald. Would you have been embarrassed!"

TALE OF THE TIMES—A student nurse with a passion for cleanliness once decided it would be a good idea to sterilize the hospital patients' dental plates. She collected them and deposited them in a kettle of boiling water. When she took a look half an hour later, she discovered that some of the plates had shrunk alarmingly, and some had dissolved. Lying in the bottom of the kettle was a large assortment of loose teeth.

Tender Popovers Specialty at Columbia Country Club

Until I ate some delicious popovers yesterday at the Columbia Country Club for luncheon, I had forgotten what a splendid hot bread they are. Since they are one of the simplest of the quick breads to make, I used to teach them to beginner's cooking classes. Several years ago when a class had made them, one of the girls became so excited and delighted because the popovers had "popped." Well, that is what they are supposed to do. However, the rise or fall of this breadstuff depends upon two things:

The correct heat with which to bake them.

Cooking authorities do not agree upon the types of pan. Some think iron pans are a "must" and must be hissing hot before the batter goes into them. Others advocate cold oven glassware cups. To bake in hot or cold pan, either iron, aluminum or glassware is a matter of opinion. But it is not a matter of opinion about handling the batter quickly an dbaking them quickly.

Here is the recipe that I know will make the popovers "pop," whether preheated iron pans or cold glass ones are used.

Popovers

Sift 1 cup soft wheat flour. Add ½ teaspoon salt. Beat 2 eggs in a bowl until frothy. Add 1 cup milk and 1 tablespoon melted butter. Stir the liquid in slowly to the sifted dry ingredients. Beat ingredients until well blended—but no longer—then pour batter into oiled pans, filling them only 2-3 full. Bake popovers in hot oven, 450 degrees, for 20 minutes. Reduce heat and dry in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 15 minutes. Remove from pans at once.

Salad Ring

This salad ring is hearty and easy to serve. Mold savory potato salad in lemon or tomato jelly ring. When congealed, unmold on shredded lettuce or cress. Fit long spears of dill pickles in center and surround with ham-stuffed hard-cooked eggs.

Shells Are Decorative

Shells will really come into their own as decorative accessories this year with every graceful sort of shell imaginable being put to exotic uses as bowls, mirror frames, boxes, small elegancies. Charming also are the "bouquets" of coral in shell baskets.

Ringside Table

He—Do you mind being so close to the music?

She—Oh, no, it's fun—don't you think?

He—A drink! DRINK!

She—Oh! . . . I believe I'd rather have orange juice.

He—All right (to waiter) One tomato juice for the lady and one Old-Fashioned.

He—Now what IS that they're playing?

She—It sounds like "I'm Hungry for Love."

He—Beg pardon?

She—"I'm Hungry——"

He—Oh, yes! Wait now, where is that waiter? . . . I told him to hurry . . . Oh waiter! waiter! . . . I know you're hungry——

She—No! No! It's the song I mean——

He—Well, thank Heaven, here's the food!

She—Yes, it does look good. Now what's that——

She—Oh, I mean the music—say, I didn't order spinach!

He—I didn't order chicken—say waiter! I wanted fish . . . No! no not a dish . . . FISH! . . . Oh, well, let it go . . . Is your order all right?

He—Beg pardon?

She—I said I hadn't taken a bite YET——

He—Oh what's the use!

She—Beg pardon?

He—Willkie gaining ground for PRESIDENT.

She—Oh, yes, I think Roosevelt will be President, don't you?

He—I hope not!

She—Beg pardon?

He—Oh, never mind.

She—Well there's this much about Roosevelt—say what is that song?

He—Yes, I'll say he's been in too long—oh, beg pardon! Did I step on your toe?

She—That tune is so familiar!

HE—FAMILIAR! Well I assure you I didn't mean to be!

She—Beg pardon?

He—I said I was sorry I stepped on your TOE.

She—Oh, do you want to GO?

He—NO! NO! NO! Not yet.

He—Well, shall we leave?

She—Oh, yes—any time you want to?

She—MARRY here!

He—No! No! TARRY.

She—Oh, no. Let's go. It's so noisy.

He—Sure you wouldn't like any kind of a drink?

She—Mink! You mean a mink—

He—No; No! DRINK!

She—You know I thought you said MINK.

He—Say, let's go! Now where's the bill? Waiter!

She—Now what IS that they're playing?

He—I think it's "Have You a Honey?"

He—I said HONEY.

She—HONEY?

He—Say, let's get out of this place!

Mary Haworth's Mail

Just Turned 16, and Now Privileged to Have Beaux, Girl Asks Lots of Advice on 'The Little Things'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I've just passed my sixteenth birthday and my parents are permitting me to have dates. I'm very anxious to do everything correctly and so I would like some advice on the little things, such as (1) the right time to be home; (2) the right type of conversation, and (3) how gracefully to get out of being kissed.

This fall I'll be a member of the best sorority at my school, but I'm really not interested in it so much, because the majority of the girls smoke and drink. I'm not a prude, but honestly, do you think high school girls should do those things? I'd like to know what you think of hand-holding in the movies. There are so many things I need to know, I wonder if you could recommend any good books containing "rules for dating," for me to read. JANE L.

DEAR JANE L.: "Home before midnight" should be the general rule for a high school girl. Eleven o'clock curfew is about right when she has had a movie date; or met with the gang at a friend's house, or spent the evening bowling, or at the skating rink, or what-have-you. On special occasions, such as week-end school dances, she should be home at the hour designated by her parents—who would, of course, take into account how long it would take her to drive home from the scene of the event. The party might last until 1:30, and she might be allowed 30 minutes' grace to get a snack at the currently popular "hot shoppe," and 30 minutes more to drive home.

"Boy-and-girl" conversation is little different from "girl-and-girl" conversation. It concerns the special interests of each, as well as such interests as the two may have in common. You might talk about your school, the activities of your sorority, what happened on your vacation last summer; the peculiarities of some of your teachers, your difficulty with certain required courses, etc, and all your remarks along these lines would be simply "leaders" intended to set the boy's tongue wagging in equally reminiscent vein.

If your parents have said you must be home by 11 o'clock, you might say as much to the boy shortly after leaving the house. You might ask if his parents are strict about hours, and if he says "No," you could reply with a sigh, "I guess it's different, being a boy; your parents don't think you're such a baby," and then go on to discuss the theoretical advantages of being a man. That should give him a pleasureable sense of his own consequence, and also give you a starting point from which to invite his views on any subject that occurs to you: Sports, the war, women's fashions, the latest dance steps, the best band music, what he plans to do with his life, etc.

The graceful way to "get out of being kissed" is to be brief about your good-night leave-taking when that hour arrives. Take command of the situation on reaching your front door or on escorting him to the door (if he has been invited inside for a few minutes)—by extending your hand, grasping his warmly and saying, "Well, good night. I've had a lovely time. Thanks a million" or words to that effect.

Hand-holding in the movies is a gesture of affectionate, established understanding, which you had better not permit unless you are prepared to be kissed good-night. Lots of married persons hold hands in the movies, and so do many engaged couples. So, too, do tried-and-true sweethearts who have "known each other forever," as the saying goes. However, such couples don't regard the handclasp as having mushy, special significance, but merely as a casual extension of their deeply friendly feeling for each other.

As for drinking and smoking among high school girls—I think such practices are pathetically premature affectations. They are no more becoming to a girl of that age than a dress of her mother's would be. They rob her of what should be one of her principal involuntary appeals, namely: A suggestion, an impression of radiant health—healthy mind, healthy spirit, healthy body. Furthermore, drinking as a supposed diversion amongst women is becoming, yearly, more and more passe.

A co-ed at a local university told me last spring that smoking seems to be losing favor with most of the campus belles of her acquaintances. As she explained it, a campus belle is usually a smart girl, and smart girls know the value of being "different," and some of them have got wise to the fact that one easy way of being different and, at the same time, more attractive looking, is to lay off cigarettes. So for heaven's sake don't make the mistake of thinking you must drink and smoke to be popular; because the truth of the matter is, it works just the other way around, in the long run of time.

I'm sorry I don't know any good books containing "rules for dating"—but a knowledge of basic good manners should cover any questions that may arise. If you were to read a copy of Emily Post's "Etiquette" from beginning to end, I should think you would be fortified against any emergency. You would know what constitutes well bred behavior for maid and man. And while I don't mean you should require Chesterfieldian polish in your boyish admirers, I urge you never to be content with anything less than high minded conduct, in every situation. M. H.

Mary Catherine Holmes Becomes Bride of Dr. Coman in St. John's

Mammoth Reception Held at Carlton; Couple, Who Flew to New York After Ceremony, to Sail Today for Mexico

By Hope Ridings Miller.

SAILING FROM NEW YORK at noon today on the S. S. Monterey will be Dr. and Mrs. Dana Coman, whose marriage here yesterday afternoon was one of the highlights of the season's social calendar.

The former Mary Catherine Holmes, daughter of Mrs. George Robert Holmes, became a bride at a ceremony in St. John's Church, and then, with her new husband, rode down the street a block to greet several hundred guests at a reception at the Carlton Hotel.

White lilies, palms and smilax decorated the church, and tall white tapers lighted the altar before which the couple exchanged their vows at 4 o'clock. The Rev. Dr. Oliver J. Hart, a friend of the bride's family for a number of years, officiaed in the presence of a distinguished gathering.

A concert of organ music, featuring compositions from Bach, Brahms and Franck, entertained guests who arrived early; but promptly at the appointed hour the spotlight fell on a choir processional, and shortly thereafter the ushers, the flower girl and the bride herself walked down the aisle.

AS THE CHOIR SANG the processional number, Miss Holmes appeared on the arm of her uncle, Stephen T. Early, who gave her in marriage. In a cloud of ivory satin and tulle she approached the altar and stood beside the man who was to be her husband. Her frock, cut on simple lines, was styled with a fitted bodice, a V-neckline and long sleeves. Her full skirt, gathered at the back, terminated in a graceful train, and her veil of tulle fell from a tiara of white blossoms.

Cascading from the bride's pearl satin-covered prayer book were streamers of orchids, orange blossoms and classic myrtle, and an heirloom gold cross, set with diamonds, and hanging from a slender chain that encircled her throat, further accented her attractive ensemble.

The bride's only attendant was her small sister, Kathryn, who served as flower girl, wearing an ivory satin frock fashioned on bouffant lines. Her headdress was a picturesque satin bonnet, and she carried a bouquet of sweetheart roses, centered with a golden butterfly orchid.

Dr. A. Barklie Coulter was best man, and the ushers included Philip Greenwell, of Baltimore; John Devereaux, of Chevy Chase; Philemon B. Coulter, of New York; Clinton C. Waters, of Baltimore, and Alfons Landa and James Andrews-Speed, of Washington.

IMMEDIATELY FOLLOWING the wedding, guests went to the Carlton Hotel, where the spacious Carlton room was the scene of the mammoth reception. Dr. Coman and his bride, the latter's mother and Mr. Early greeted the long line of guests in a flower-decked adjoining room. Mrs. Holmes was a handsome figure in a frock of dark blue crepe, set off with a wide-brimmed matching hat, white gloves and a corsage of white orchids.

White lilies and chrysanthemums stemmed from tall vases in both rooms. A massive bouquet of white dahlias and chrysanthemums centered the long table that groaned beneath a selection of tea-time dainties that would do honor to a diplomatic reception.

A four-tiered wedding cake towered from a small table nearby, and shortly after all guests had arrived, the bride and bridegroom appeared there to hold court briefly and to cut the cake. There were champagne toasts to the newlyweds; there was an orchestra playing softly during the entire reception; there was a caviar bar around which guests gathered four-deep; and there was a sizable company staying on to enjoy the pleasant party long after the bride and bridegroom had slipped away.

THE COUPLE LINGERED for more than an hour, however, and before they had voiced a final farewell the former Miss Holmes made a tour through the throng, stopping briefly here and there to chat with friends and relatives, many of whom had come from a long distance to witness her wedding.

Meanwhile, the party had taken on semblance of the usual big-league reception. Assisting Mrs. Holmes by taking turns at pouring tea or coffee were three of her sisters, Mrs. James Hennessey, of Boston; Mrs. E. Barry Faris, of Scarsdale, N. Y., and Mrs. Magnen McArdle, of New York; also, Mrs. Jesse Jones, Lady Lewis, Mrs. Stephen T. Early, Mrs. Edwin M. Watson, Mrs. Patrick Hurley, Mrs. Ulric Bell, Mrs. Lyle Wilson and Mrs. Raymond Clendenning Miller.

Scores of notables were still circling around the tea table and quaffing champagne when Dr. Coman and his bride left. A short time afterward the couple had boarded a plane for New York, and from there they will sail today for a honeymoon in Mexico City. They will make their home in New York.

The former Miss Holmes is a daughter of the late George Robert Holmes, chief of the Washington bureau, International News Service for 18 years and president of the Gridiron Club in 1938. She attended Friends School and Western High School here and had one year at the University of Wisconsin, her father's alma mater. Dr. Coman is a graduate of Harvard University and Johns Hopkins and was formerly physician on the Labrador coast with Sir Wilfred T. Grenfell. He was a member of the Byrd and Ellsworth Antarctic expeditions and is now conducting nutritional research.

Among guests at the reception were the Attorney General and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. Cordell Hull, Senator and Mrs. James F. Brynes, Homer S. Cummings, Mr. and Mrs. William Stanley, Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, Mrs. Henry Suydam, of South Orange, N. J.; Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. P. H. V. Weems, of Annapolis; Jesse Jones, Secretary of Commerce; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Sinnott, of Maplewood, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. John Thomason, of Lynchburg, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Clinton C. Waters, of Baltimore, and several hundred others.

Mrs. Hiram Bingham's Daughter Enrolling For Secretarial Studies

Another of the season's debutantes has decided to mingle work with play this winter. Miss Kitty Hill, daughter of Mrs. Hiram Bingham is enrolling in a local secretarial school and will study from 9 to 3. Never before have so many debutantes gone in for studies or learning a profession as this year—a reflection of the seriousness of the times we live in.

Former Senator and Mrs. Bingham and Miss Hill are again at their residence on R street after a summer at their place in Old Lyme, Conn. While there, they were visited by Mrs. Bingham's two older daughters, Mrs. Phillips H. Clarke, of Washington, and Mrs. Townsend Phillips, of New York.

The latter spent last week-end here with her family and there's a possibility she may return on Saturday for another brief visit.

Miss Hill has not yet set the date for her coming out party, at which she is expected to share honors with Miss Barbara Bohen, granddaughter of Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith. Mrs. Meredith and her daughter, Mrs. Frederick Bohen, of Des Moines, are now in New York. Miss Bohen has just entered Smith College as a freshman.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

THE WASHINGTON MATRON who, by a misplacing of place-cards, found herself sitting beside her own husband at a dinner-party and who protested, "Please just leave him here. We haven't had time to talk for weeks!" has her counterpart in Mrs. Anthony Biddle. The charming wife of the, until recently, United States Ambassador to Poland is spending a few days in the Capital. When she knew that her distinguished husband would address the Overseas Writers at their weekly luncheon she wistfully let it be known that she was longing to hear him speak.

Mrs. Biddle was immediately invited to come in after the luncheon, a stag affair, and listen to the head of the family. She arrived, looking very smart, accompanied by her son-in-law and daughter, Prince and Princess Aleksander Hohenlohe. All three of them were raptly attentive during a thrilling discourse.

At THE CONCLUSION of the talk, Mrs. Biddle said that she had been through two invasions with the Ambassador—Poland and France—and bombardments from Warsaw to Bordeaux, but that it was the first time she had ever heard him tell the continuous story of his experiences since the beginning of the war.

Mrs. Biddle's son, Ted Schulzey, a nice boy who was such fun on last winter's skating parties on the river, is now in England fighting with the Polish army. It seems no time at all since he left Washington in charge of the ambulances which he and pretty Peggy Hohenlohe were sending to the Polish army in France and what he must have been through since then. The invasion of France, flight to England, and I don't think he is yet out of his teens.

MR. BIDDLE told an anecdote of his friend, Ambassador Kennedy which shows that, Battle of London or no, he can still wisecrack. The dashing Tony sent Jo Kennedy a cable thanking him for being kind to his young step-son fighting in England, and congratulating him on his narrow escape from a bomb.

Mr. Kennedy wired back, "Thanks for your kind cable. It touched me but so far German bombs can't."

Ella Kate Kitchen Becomes The Bride of Harley Heirs

The marriage of Miss Ella Kate Kitchen and Harley Heirs took place last evening at 8:30 o'clock in the Nazarene Church with the Rev. Ernest Grosse officiating. The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Lee Kitchen, of Wakefield, Va. Mr. Heirs is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Heirs, of South Carolina.

Given in marriage by her brother, the bride wore an ivory satin gown with a V-neckline, long, pointed sleeves and a sweeping train. Her tulle veil fell from a coronet of pearls and orange blossoms. She carried a prayer book with gardenias and lilies of the valley. Her only ornament was a gold cross and chain.

Mrs. Clara Hartley served as matron of honor for her sister. She wore a shell pink taffeta frock sprinkled with silver dots. Her toque and bouquet were of yellow roses. The remaining attendants were Mrs. Marguerite Smith and Miss Frances Martin. They wore aster blue frocks and carried sweetheart roses. Their tiny toques were of rose.

Nelson Cox served as best man. Ushers were Jim Heirs, brother of the bridegroom; Henry Deel, E. Perry Cunningham and Jaspar P. Hartley. Immediately following the ceremony there was a reception at Collier's Inn. Following their wedding trip to Miami the couple will make their home in Annapolis. The bride attended Strayers College and Mr. Heirs was graduated from Benjamin Franklin University.

Chapins to Fete Orme Wilsons

Mr. and Mrs. Selden Chapin will entertain tomorrow afternoon at a cocktail party in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Orme Wilson. The affair will be given at the apartment of Mr. Chapin's mother, Mrs. Frederick Chapin, 2101 Connecticut avenue.

Orme Wilson has recently arrived in Washington to fill the State Department post formerly occupied by Selden Chapin. Shortly after the Thanksgiving holidays the Chapins will be off to Mr. Chapin's new post at Montevideo, Uruguay.

Carter-Sturtevant Nuptials Saturday

Miss Frances Carter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. A. Carter, has completed plans for her wedding to Charles Lyon Sturtevant, of this city. The ceremony will take place on Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Carter home in Georgetown. The Rev. Howard S. Anderson and the Rev. Albert Joseph McCartney will officiate.

Only members of the two families will witness the ceremony, which will be followed by a small reception for close friends.

Montgomery's Inspection Tips Scales in Buyer's Favor

Montgomery County autoists and housewives are getting more for their money this year because of the appointment of a weights and measures inspector a year ago by the Montgomery County commissioners, a report to the county commissioners declared yesterday.

The report, submitted by Inspector Alvie A. Moxley, shows that of 741 measuring pumps tested there were only 9 over and 19 short measure, whereas 766 scales inspected showed only two giving short-weight, against 15 weighing over. The inspector condemned 12 spring scales and 5 computing scales.

The survey covered March 1 to September 15, 1940, and was in marked contrast to the report for the period between inauguration of the inspection service, September 15, 1939, and March 1.

Earlier Report Compared

In the earlier report, of 699 measuring pumps inspected, 23 were over and 35 short measure. Of a total of 764 scales inspected, 49 scales showed short measure, 13 gave overweight.

The commissioners yesterday received a letter from E. P. Knollman, of Old Georgetown road, Bethesda, opposing a proposed low-cost housing project planned for a 40-acre tract on Old Georgetown road, 2½ miles from Wisconsin avenue, by Standard Properties, Inc. Knollman asserted the project would "destroy property values in the area," which now is devoted to larger homes.

Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor informed the board that he had named Fred W. Heine as a committing magistrate from the Colesville district. Heine will receive an additional $75 a month salary from the commissioners for acting as committing magistrate in addition to his salary as clerk to the Silver Spring trial magistrate's court.

Zone Petition Filed

J. Guy Neal, attorney for Harry Poretsky and Clifford E. Thomas, filed petition for rezoning of lot 17, block A, and parcel A, block A, of Woodside Village, on Georgia avenue between Ridge road and Corwin drive, from residential A to commercial D. The commissioners directed the clerk to the board to advertise a hearing for the application.

The clerk also was directed to advertise a hearing on an application for a permit to operate a riding school on the Maryland edge of Rock Creek Park near the line of the proposed extension of Western avenue, filed by Margaret Rounds Stewart in the name of the Pegasus Stable.

A permit to operate a veterinary hospital at Chevy Chase Lake was granted for another year to F. Larmour Oyster, veterinarian and horseman.

The Social Service League reported that 180 children had been cared for in September at a cost of $3,304.82 and the board ordered reimbursement of the league.

Two Registrars Named

Leesburg, Va., Sept. 24.—Hawpe Adams, son of Mayor and Mrs. A. N. Adams, of Purcellville, has been named registrar at that place to succeed E. T. Hirst. Miss Virginia Hall has been named registrar at Middleburg.

Alexandria's Registrars Too Few for Draft

More to Be Needed To Do Job in Day, Colasanto Reports

The addition of several registrars in each voting ward of Alexandria will be required for adequate registration of conscripts under the Selective Service Act on registration day, October 16, James N. Colasanto, secretary of the city electoral board, declared yesterday on his return from a one-day school for electoral secretaries at Richmond.

While the draft registration will follow the same plan established for registration of voters, Colesanto said, the present personnel will be insufficient to complete the program in a single day. The city has only one registrar in each ward, he pointed out, and State officials have estimated about ten minutes will be required for the registration of each conscript.

Officials at the electoral school estimated about 15 per cent of the city's 35,000 people would be eligible for selective service, Colasanto announced.

While registration normally would be conducted at the regularly designated polling places in the city, the electoral board has the privilege of changing the locations to meet demands, secretaries attending the school were informed.

Colasanto said State officials suggested that the individual electoral boards sponsor series of mass meetings to explain fully the registration procedure, and added "the local board will undoubtedly follow this suggestion."

Unless the electoral board decides on one or more changes, Alexandria conscripts would be registered at the six ward polling places, situated as follows: First, Alexandria Armory, 200 block South Royal street; Second, City Hall building, 100 block North Royal street; Third, Friendship Fire Co., 100 block S. Alfred street; Fourth, Odd Fellows Hall, 200 block N. Columbus street; Fifth, corner of Washington avenue and Walnut street, and Sixth, Del Ray Clinic building, Mount Vernon avenue.

Accident Squad Investigates 34 Crashes in Day

With two days' experience behind it, the police's new accident prevention unit shifted into high gear yesterday and investigated 34 traffic mishaps between 8 a. m. and midnight with hardly a hitch.

All were minor ones except two, involving 3-year-old colored boys. Charles Grady, of 627 Fairmont avenue northwest, and Joseph Sanders, of 503 L street northwest, both struck by cars as they ran across the street.

The Sanders child's leg was broken at Sixth and L streets northwest by a car which police said was driven by Lewis Kelly, colored, 32, of Silver Spring, Md. He was taken to Childrens Hospital.

The other boy, struck in front of his home, was dismissed after treatment at Freedman's Hospital. Margaret McCane, 34, of 727 Park road northwest, was listed as the driver of the automobile.

Clinic Slated in Boyce

Berryville, Va., Sept. 24.—A tuberculosis clinic, sponsored by the Clarke County Nurses Association, will be held in Boyce parish hall from 9 a. m. to 2 p. m., on October 2, it was announced today by Mrs. Graham Dougherty, president of the nurses' group.

Bids on Two Montgomery Highway Projects Opened

Three Concerns Submit Low Estimates On Connecticut Avenue Extension Job; Old Georgetown Road to Be Resurfaced

The Maryland Roads Commission at Baltimore yesterday opened bids on the reconstruction of sections of Connecticut avenue extended and the Old Georgetown road in Montgomery County.

The Connecticut avenue project includes construction of 1.75 miles of concrete base, curbs and gutters, starting at Chevy Chase Circle. Low bidders were Highway Engineering & Construction Co., of Washington and Security, Md., $166,119.75; P. Reddington & Sons, Baltimore, $191,833.54; Wilmoth Paving Co., Washington, $199,753.40.

Old Georgetown road is to be resurfaced and widened for a distance of 1.965 miles, starting at the Bank of Bethesda. Plans for the Connecticut avenue project call for a parkway in the center. Montgomery County residents have urged this improvement for a number of years.

The Roads Commission also opened bids on four other projects in the State. They included:

Carroll County: 1.071 miles of bituminous roadway and mix surfacing on Washington road, south of Fenby. Grove Lime Co., low bidder, with an offer of $22,335.30.

The new building, which is to be completed about July 1, 1941, will be built under a $450,000 PWA grant. Part of the municipal center, it will be three stories high and faced with limestone. Present offices of the Recorder of Deeds, are at 412 Fifth street northwest.

Drive Leader Named

Winchester, Va., Sept. 24.—W. W. Glass, former mayor, has been appointed campaign manager by the Democratic executive committee of Winchester, it was announced today.

Radcliffe Calls G. O. P. the Party Of Criticism

In the Presidential election, mere Republican "criticism" cannot best the Democratic record of action, Senator George L. Radcliffe (Democrat), of Maryland, told the Woman's National Democratic Club last night.

"No party in the history of this country has given as much action as the Democratic party in the last seven years," he said.

"And its general drive has been in the direction that the people approve," Radcliffe added. "The Republican Party has been the party of criticism."

Radcliffe, speaking at one of the club's weekly meetings, was introduced by Mrs. Arthur D. Condon, chairman of its campaign committee. Mrs. D. Tucker Brown, president, spoke at the meetings at its headquarters, 1526 New Hampshire avenue northwest. Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, widow of the Senator, spoke briefly about events of the Democratic convention in Chicago.

Drafted Men Will Be Better for It, Army Promises

The Army, in an effort to sell conscription to young America, yesterday issued a prospectus of its forthcoming military life, declaring the majority should thrive on the Army diet, enjoy both work and play in the service, and become better citizens.

"Not only is it intended to turn out well trained soldiers, but it is expected to improve the men who come under Army supervision, physically, mentally and morally . . . a War Department statement declared.

"The folks at home can be assured that their young men will be well cared for, and it is believed that in later years the men who will have been selected for this training will look back on their year in the Army as one of the most instructive, interesting and valuable periods of their growth and development."

Reorganizing Bill Sponsors Gain Hope

Rep. Kennedy Talks With King; Senate Committee Action Sought on Measure

Sponsors of the District reorganization bill, which was passed by the House more than two weeks ago but is lying dormant in the Senate District Committee, yesterday gained renewed hope from reports that Congress would not adjourn but merely recess over the election.

Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, author of the House bill, has held several conferences with Chairman King and is understood to have urged that a new subcommittee chairman be appointed to hold hearings because of the illness of Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada.

McCarran has been in Naval Hospital continuously since he was named chairman of the subcommittee. Both he and Senator King have expressed objections to the Kennedy bill and have insisted that public hearings should be held.

Kennedy and other members of the reorganization subcommittee which reported the bill believe that ample hearings have been held in the House and by the Commissioners. They likewise have indicated a willingness to accept any reasonable Senate amendments.

The author of the bill and the Senate critics are in sharp disagreement over whether or not the proposed reorganization would effect any municipal economies.

The Senators, accepting estimates of Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, predict that the reform actually would increase the operating costs of the District because of the provisions for new executive positions and departments.

Representative Kennedy, who cites the saving effected by a reorganization of the fire department, believes that possibly as much as $3,000,000 may be saved ultimately in the city's expenses.

Capital News In Brief

One Lee Gives Tickets, Two Lees 'Fix' Them

Robert E. Lee, of 265 Concord avenue northwest, bank cashier, left his auto last week at a hack stand. Motorcycle Policeman Robert E. Lee came along and left a ticket. Whereupon Lee appeared before the Traffic Bureau commander, explained he had been detained by illness in the family, and the ticket was "fixed."

Robert E. Lee, jr., son of Robert E. Lee, bank cashier, ran out of gas and was forced to park in no-parking zone. He got a ticket, but at the Third Precinct station it was decided that the excuse was a good one, and he too got off with a warning.

Altogether 78 tickets were "fixed," including one for Representative Dewey Short (Republican), of Missouri, who left his car in an official parking space.

Dental Checkup to Cover All Elementary Schools

Health Officer George C. Ruhland yesterday announced all children in the city enrolled in elementary schools will receive dental inspections this school term. This is the first time children of the white, colored and parochial schools will be included in the dental health program.

Aim of the program is to get dental corrections through inspections. Dr. Ruhland said health department clinics will be available to children whose parents cannot avail themselves of the services of a private dentist. He said there will be lectures in classrooms given by dental hygienists.

Leav[illegible]a. Jail to Find D.C. C[illegible]ck Charge Waiting

When Charles Scheinman, 48, of Brooklyn, N. Y., stepped from the Richmond (Va.) Penitentiary yesterday after serving a year, Detective Sergts. Wanamaker and Felber were waiting for him.

Last night he was returned here and being held at the First Precinct Station for investigation in connection with two bad checks for $110 that were passed here in 1939.

Dr. Hart to Speak At Gunston Hall

The Rev. Oliver Hart, D. D., former rector of St. John's Church, will make the opening address to the student body of Gunston Hall School, 1906 Florida avenue northwest, at exercises today at 10:30 a. m.

An all-school party Saturday night in the gymnasium will climax opening week events.

Police Fall 11 Times For Telephone Hoax

A woman's tearful voice came over the police headquarters telephone at 4 p. m. yesterday: "I just killed my husband."

"You did!" exclaimed the switchboard operator.

"Yes," said the voice. "I finally caught up with him. I shot him five times."

The voice gave an address in the 3300 block of Pennsylvania avenue southeast, and two police cars raced to the scene. There was no such address as the number given.

A few minutes later the same story came over the Eleventh Precinct telephone, and this time police sped to a false address in the 3300 block of Wheeler road northwest.

There were nine more calls from the same voice before 8:30 p. m., but the law had become rather skeptical. Not until the last call, to Fifth Precinct Station, was another police car dispatched. The voice had a familiar sound to the man who answered the phone there, and he sent police to a residence nearby.

There they found a woman very drunk whose husband was very well, thank you.

Coeds Assist Sophomores in Drenching Freshmen With Buckets at Maryland U.

Hazing Is Resumed At College Park Despite Objections

Some 100 pajama-clad freshmen of the University of Maryland prayed for rain last night, and their prayers were answered by bucket-wielding coeds who appeared at dormitory windows to douse the kneeling "rats" below.

One freshman was conked on the head by a wastepaper basket employed to supply the downpour. Another fainted. But there were no serious consequences.

It all was part of traditional sophomore-sponsored ceremonies designed to teach freshmen that they are the lowest form of campus life, although the cooperation of the coeds in furnishing rain was an unexpected development.

Ordered into their nightclothes shortly after supper, the "rats" were hustled about the campus with pillowcases over their heads and subjected to horseplay that included putting out bonfires started by sophomores.

Then, tying up traffic for some time, they were hustled across the boulevard at College Park to the coliseum and forced to kiss the huge metal terrapin, university symbol that stands at the entrance.

Traffic again was halted when they returned for the rain ceremonies.

University authorities several times have threatened investigations of hazing activities at College Park and some stir was created by a rebellion of the freshmen last year against sophomore "dictatorship."

However, Dr. Geary Eppley, dean of men, told The Post last night he could not say what reaction the latest hazing would have on authorities.

Veteran Breaks Out Champagne To Begin His Second Century

Birthdays are birthdays, and all deserve parties, but when a man turns the century—well, that's something special.

This was the way William G. Batcheler, 100-year-old Confederate veteran, explained the champagne at his birthday party yesterday at Soldiers' Home Hospital.

Batcheler and a group of his close friends downed the sparkling liquid in honor of the day, when the veteran, who hopes to live another hundred, blew out ten candles on a birthday cake. It was a gala occasion for Ward 2.

The soldier, who was born in Charleston, S. C., fought for the South throughout the Civil War. Mustered out of service in 1865, he enlisted in the Army nine years later.

A cavalryman in the Indian Wars, Batcheler took part in the lengthy chase that finally led to the capture of Geronimo, the Indian Chief, in 1886. He was incapacitated by a fall from his horse and admitted to Soldiers' Home in 1896. Later he resumed active service, and returned to the home in 1915.

He has been there since.

Police Plan 'Specialized' Crash Curb

'Crack Down' Slated In Violations Causing Most Accidents

A new system of "specialized" traffic law enforcement under the recently inaugurated police accident investigation division was announced yesterday by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent.

He called for a weekly analysis of all accidents, involving infractions of traffic regulations, to determine which, if any, simple violation is responsible for the majority of crashes.

For instance, Maj. Brown pointed out, if excessive speeds are found causing most of the accidents during a given week, policemen throughout the city will be ordered to "crack down" on that type of offenders. The same, he said, will hold true of any other law violation contributing to accidents.

A report on which infraction—or infractions—have caused the most accidents since the investigation unit began operations last Sunday will be in Maj. Brown's hands next Monday, Inspector Arthur E. Miller, head of "crash" squad, promised.

Meanwhile, the new squad's first fatal accident—the case of Berry Minnis, colored, 52, of 1717 Webster street northwest, who was killed Sunday night at Sixteenth and Webster streets northwest, will be presented to a coroner's jury at 11:30 a. m. today. It will mark the city's first attempt to place the blame in a death crash through the testimony of scientifically trained investigators.

An inquiry at the crash scene was made under the direction of Lieut. William Liverman, the squad's chief investigator. Driver of the death car—Charles N. Thompson, 31, 4029 Columbia pike, Arlington, Va.—was first charged with failing to yield the right of way to a pedestrian. He was later held for the coroner's action when Minnis died of his injuries.

Thompson's car, investigators reported, skidded 48 feet 3 inches in attempting to stop.

More U. S. Complaint Units Urged

All Federal Offices Need One to Oil Personnel Relations, Ramspeck Says

Personnel units to settle grievances of employes in each Federal agency were urged last night by Representative Robert Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, at a meeting of the Society for Personnel Administration.

Setting up of the employe organizations in departments where they do not now exist would serve as a curb on potentially dangerous complaint cases which frequently make newspaper headlines and "smear" the Government and its merit system, the legislator declared, at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets northwest.

"These cases do more to tear down efficient Government administration than any other thing," Ramspeck asserted.

At present many employes are afraid to take their grievances to division heads for fear of jeopardizing their jobs, the Georgian said.

Under the terms of his proposal the personnel units would have complete power to adjust situations about which employes complained, except in cases involving dismissal or serious salary cuts.

The Representative stressed harmony as a means to speed the national defense program.

"You can get more work out of a satisfied employe than a dissatisfied one," Ramspeck asserted, urging the "grievance system" and the blanketing of all workers into the merit system.

Rain Predicted In 4-Day Forecast To Skip Capital

The Weather Bureau's long-range forecast, covering the four-day period from today through Saturday, predicts much cooler weather for the rest of the week over the North and Middle Atlantic States, excepting New England.

The forecast: Cooler, moderate to moderately heavy rain today, ending tonight; then generally fair for the remainder of the week; much cooler this afternoon and tonight, with temperature remaining much below normal until Friday afternoon, when a gradual rise will begin.

According to the daily forecast, however, no rain is seen for the District today, with fair and cooler weather due both today and tomorrow. High for yesterday was 81 at 2:45 p. m.; low was 66, at 6:30 a. m.

Two Bandits Rob I St. Liquor Shop Of $190 in Cash Box

Two young men robbed a liquor store at 1708 I street northwest of $190 last night.

Carrying revolvers, one ordered the manager, Joseph C. Monaghan, 35, and Quentin Newkirk, 22, the delivery boy, into a back room and made them lie face down while the other attempted to loot the register. But he couldn't get it open, so summoned Monaghan to show him how, then ordered him back to the floor.

A few minutes later two colored youths, one brandishing a pistol, took $25 from Lillian Newman, 21, manager at an ice cream shop at 3655 New Hampshire avenue northwest.

Conflict in China Aids Christianity, Missionary Says

Miss Katheryne Thompson, a Presbyterian missionary in China for 19 years, returned to Washington, her home, yesterday with a report that the war is making Christians out of more Chinese than did peace.

Miss Thompson

"And this despite a decrease in missionary man power, she said.

"They want something that seems sincere and dependable," Miss Thompson observed. "They are so upset. If they hear of something that will bring them peace and happiness, they want it."

Miss Thompson, who taught school in a mission at Kiang Yin, on the Yangtze River, 100 miles west of Shanghai, spent six months aboard a houseboat with three other missionaries when Japanese besieged the village and set fire to all the buildings except a dormitory.

She expects to return to the mission after a year's furlough at the home of her mother, Mrs. E. Stewart Thompson, 5237 Illinois avenue northwest. Her father, now dead, for years was executive secretary of the Rivers and Harbors Congress.

Woman's Death in Viaduct Crash Rouses Silver Spring

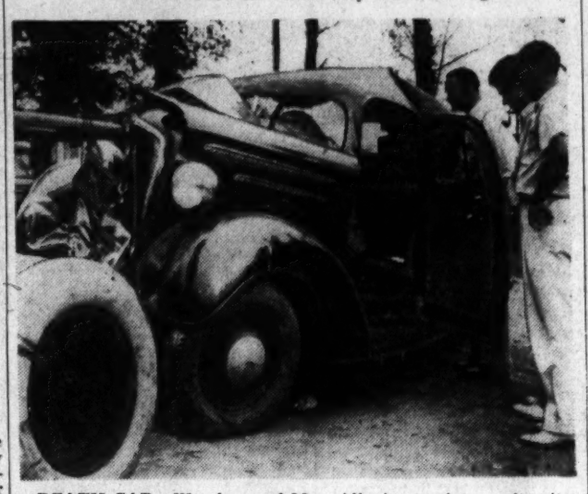
SCENE OF FATAL CRASH—Mrs. Elna Allen, Takoma Park (Md.) beauty shop proprietor, died yesterday in Washington Sanitarium after the car she was driving crashed against a steel pillar (arrow) supporting the railroad trestle over the Georgia avenue underpass at Silver Spring, Md. Note how right passageway is narrower than left. Buses and wide trucks are forced to use the passageway at left regardless of the direction in which they are traveling



DEATH CAR—Wreckage of Mrs. Allen's car shown after it was towed to garage

Silver Spring's death trap claimed another victim yesterday—Mrs. Elna Gerlac Allen, 55, Silver Spring beauty parlor owner, who died as the result of injuries suffered when her automobile crashed into a steel girder under the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad viaduct on Georgia avenue, near the District Line.

The fatality revived community demands for removal of the danger spot.

The Silver Spring Business Men's Association last night sent protest telegrams to Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor, Senator George L. Radcliffe, Representative William D. Byron, Col. Ezra Whitman, chairman of the Maryland State roads commission, and D. L. Moorman, general passenger agent of the B. & O.

The telegrams read:

"Our Georgia avenue underpass has claimed three more victims in the last 25 days. Frank Chandler, seriously injured September 16; Elmore Harris, slightly injured August 31, and Elna Allen, Silver Spring business woman, died this morning four hours after striking it. For the sake of humanity, will you do something now to stop this slaughter?"

Stephen Tuhy, jr., president of the Silver Spring Citizens Association, declared:

"It is hoped that the actual needless destruction of life at last may impress Gov. O'Conor that a real project in his safety campaign—elimination of the viaduct of horrors—would earn the gratitude of all citizens of Montgomery County."

Washington Irving Cleveland, manager of the D. C. Division of the American Automobile Association, last night issued the following statement:

"For years the citizens of the Silver Spring area have been attempting to secure the elimination of the center post which has caused so many accidents during the years it has stood in the path of north and southbound traffic on Georgia avenue.

"A year ago the American Automobile Association joined with the Silver Spring Businessmen's Association in appealing to State and highway officials of Maryland for immediate elimination of this dangerous situation.

"The difficulty which has stood in the way of immediate elimination of this traffic hazard has been the cost, running in the neighborhood of $400,000, and the scarcity of funds to finance new highway construction in all portions of the State of Maryland.

"This latest tragedy at the Silver Spring railroad viaduct shows conclusively that this is a traffic hazard of such magnitude as to justify its being placed near the top of the list of those projects to receive prompt attention by the highway authorities."

Mrs. Allen, who operated a beauty parlor at 8206 Saratoga avenue, apparently was en route to her apartment in the rear of the shop when her car crashed into the center pier of the viaduct shortly before 2 a. m. yesterday. A passing Silver Spring Volunteer Fire Department member, Leonard Peters, saw the wrecked car at 2:14 a. m. He summoned the rescue squad.

Groups Seek Laboratory Reopening

Hampshire Heights, Southeast Citizens Associations Take Joint Action

Two citizens associations last night joined to move to reopen the District Testing Laboratory, built in 1931 but unused since 1933 because of a Congressional decree which banned use of its facilities and virtually ordered testing work to be taken over by the Bureau of Standards.

Hampshire Heights Citizens Association adopted a resolution urging that the testing laboratory, located at Second and Bryant streets northwest, be reopened. Southeast Citizens Association appointed a committee to investigate. The committee includes Vernis Absher, Victor Perlmutter and Bernard Ladd."

The laboratory, constructed at a cost of $100,000 to test equipment used for the District, has been a "white elephant." Cost of Bureau of Standard facilities, according to District officials, has been $15,000 annually. The officials believe the work could be done at lower cost in the city's own laboratory.

Separate Traffic Court Urged

A separate traffic court for the District was urged by Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the District of Columbia division of the American Automobile Association, in an address before the Hampshire Heights meeting.

In the opinion of some motorists, he said, some of the judges in police court are more lenient than others. As a result, he said, a motorist confronted with traffic charges may try to get his case continued before one of those judges. Cleveland pointed out that the District division of the A. A. A. had recommended the selection of one judge to devote his full time to the handling of traffic cases.

In answering questions after his address, Cleveland said "one of the pastimes of Washington is to criticize" William A. Van Duzer, District director of vehicles and traffic. "But I don't think he's been given a fair chance. I think we ought to get behind him to see that he gets the money and the personnel that he needs," Cleveland said.

Patriotic Group Indorsed

The unit indorsed in principle the Sons Courageous of True Americans, a patriotic organization, which is being promoted by Lawton Mellichampe, and individually joined as members.

Scoring the present appropriations for schools in the area, members urged school officials to borrow for capital investment if they are unable to finance school construction out of current revenue.

Second Thoughts on Monday's First Night

The I. L. G. W. U. Players Improve Their Style; Alfred Hitchcock-James Hilton-Robert Benchley Trio Makes 'Foreign Correspondent' a Rare Film

By Richard L. Coe.
Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

LOOKING BACK on the rather ingenuous spectacle of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union lifting the curtain for the traditionally top-hat National Theater opening, one is struck quite as much by the improvement in the players as by the muchly-vaunted "social significance" of the event.

To be sure, it was more a road company rather than less which our town saw in the "Pins and Needles" of 1938. In the "New Pins and Needles," the company has been at it longer, has vastly improved its diction, a troublesome snare for Harold Rome's slick lyrics in the previous edition. The singers are better trained. The pace is swifter. And the cast, while hardly material for Earl Carroll, George White or Billy Rose, is of young people whose hearts are in their work, whose spirits are zestful. And they behave in more professional a manner.

And, like it or not, professionalism is what counts in this business. Amateurs may be "amazing," "surprising," or even "good," but they are generally boring after 10 minutes. And while some of our visiting players "from the shops" are definitely amateur, several seem to be achieving professional ease. Comedians Harry Clark and Berni Gould fall into this category. They work hard and lustily, their only sign of still performing on the outside looking in being their over-anxiety. When you watch the big ones, Al Jolson, Ed Wynn, Sophie Tucker, Victor Moore and some of their standing, you'll observe that a light, easy air is in everything they do.

What makes "Pins and Needles," of course, is the cynical bitterness of the songs and sketches. Harold Rome's cutting lyrics and frequently splendid score are the foundation stones. Joseph Schrank's sketches, reaching their gleaming best in "The Red Mikado" and "The Harmony Boys," are tingling satire, although in some reaching their points too swiftly and so drag on to repetition as in the Bertrand Russell sketch, the "Papa Lewis, Mama Green" sequence and the "Cream of Mush" interlude.

On the feminine side of the players, Tuesday morning space prevented further mention of the able Jean Nicita, whose only fault in her otherwise excellent "Oh, Give Me the Good Old Days" is that she slips out of character to smile at the audience's appreciation. Then there is Dorothy Harrison's telling delivery of the genuinely exciting "Mene, Mene, Tekel," a Negro spiritual of rhythm and feeling.

As we've inferred, the players touched the inner reaches of our E street playhouse more effective than the earlier caravan had. And from the thin pickings that seem to be ahead of this anything but promising season, there's probably more true wit in "New Pins and Needles" than we'll see until a better day.

That slippery fellow Alfred Hitchcock has done it again, only better. Under the cloak of mere entertaiment, the English director brings his mastery of suspense to tell a story of international intrigue. He did it surpassing well, of course, in "The 39 Steps," "Secret Agent" and "The Lady Vanishes" (which by the by opens a return run at the Little today), but in "Foreign Correspondent" he parades the duplicity of our cosmos in that striking "edge of the seat" fashion so uniquely his own.

This reporter previewed the mystery yarn yesterday afternoon, hasn't a nail within biting distance and is already plotting to find two hours for a second visit after it opens at the Palace tomorrow morning. It has everything a Hitchcock worshipper could wish for: a terrifying scene within a creaking Dutch windmill, some chases after darksome international ringers and the traditional Hitchcock church scene, this one in the tower of London's Westminster Cathedral.

OFF THE CUFF: The Metropolitan's incoming "The Lady in Question" is a West Coast remake of that charming Raimu film, "Heart of Paris." None other than Brian Aherne plays the Parisian shopkeeper turned juryman who befriends a lady. If it's anything like the original, it will be worth seeing. . . . The local branch office of M-G-M wins the national sales contest in which all The Lion's 32 branches participated. Which means a $1,500 bonus for Manager Rudy Berger and cash rewards for his entire staff. Congratulations.

The radio stations, therefore, gave Willkie free time, for his Coffeyville speech—but that lasted 57 minutes. Michelson now demands 35 minutes free time for the New Deal. . . . Ambassador Henri-Haye: When the Metropolitan Opera presents "Daughter of the Regiment" it will be sung in French, instead of Italian—because of Lily Pons' insistence. It will conclude with the singing of "The Marseillaise," with shouts of "Vive La France!"—in which the Italian stars will join. . . . Ed Flynn: Jack Connolly, of your motion picture division, will leave Hollywood for Washington after the campaign. He'll be a major in the Signal Corps.

DEANNA DURBIN: Because your new picture, "Spring Parade," is a costume film set in old Vienna, some Universal officials decided that the fans won't approve of a costume film. After a series of meatless days he was pleased to find his table set with all the equipment for carving a steak. "This meat smells peculiar," he told the waiter, when the course arrived. "Very fine meat," Royal was assured. "Fine Spanish horse." . . . The next morning he was awakened by hearing the Notre Dame football song blaring from the sea. He looked out of the window and saw an American battle cruiser, whose crew, through a loudspeaker, played all the Notre Dame songs, as well as those of Cornell, Navy and Yale. "I cried," Royal confessed, "and defy any one not to have done the same thing."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Sept. 24 (INS).—Long, long before the war brought Alexander Korda to Hollywood to produce pictures, he was toying with the idea of starring Merle Oberon in "Manon Lescaut." Then one thing and another happened and it was delayed. Now Alex has made final arrangements to star his lovely wife in the famous opera in December after she finishes "Kiss Me Again" with Ernst Lubitsch. Interesting to this writer, at least, is the word that Julien Duvivier will direct Merle. I have been waiting ever since the French director landed in Hollywood to see who would get him. He's the lad who directed "Pepe Le Moko," later to become "Algiers" (Hedy Lamarr), "Carnet De Bal," "The End of a Day" and other top movies.

PARSONS

Duvivier has moved into the Korda studios and has already started work on the "Manon Lescaut" script, which will be adapted from Abbe Prevost's story. There are two operas, one by Puccini and the other by Massenet, but it's the Prevost story that is being used.

Hadn't been at my desk five minutes until I learned that George Raft and Warners had kissed and made up. George starts work shortly on "The Sea Wolf" with Edward G. Robinson, Ida Lupino and, believe it or not, Ann Sheridan. This sounds like another "Boom Town" with all these names. M-G-M has done a tremendous business by giving the customers more than their money's worth in the way of stars and Warners will follow suit with "The Sea Wolf." This is the best way I know to cure the double feature evil for the fans are willing to pay the same amount of money for one big picture as they do for two less important ones.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Johnny Weissmuller was so excited when Tarzan the Second arrived he could hardly be understood over the telephone. Mrs. W. is doing nicely and so is Johnny; sorry to hear Marguerite Clark, star of the silent days and an old friend, is critically ill, having had a cerebral hemmorhage while shopping Friday; I saw Arline Judge and Huntington Hartford dancing and looking into each others eyes Friday and today she and Wesley Ruggles, jr., were greeting friends in Hollywood; Kay Aldridge, the lovely one and Bob Parrish, Helen's brother, are Hollywood's most recent item; Brenda Joyce is trying to get rid of a cold that has been hanging on for days; the Deanna Durbin preview tres swanky with all of our famous stars on hand invited by Joe Pasternak. Deanna with Vaughn Paul.

Sylvia Sidney arrives Wednesday to co-star in "Carnival" with Humphrey Bogart; Mrs. Rita Foyt, the former Mrs. Wallace Beery, has gone into the dress business with Anna Dean; Robin Thomas, Michael Strange's son, and Wendy Barrie, a twosome at the House of Murphy; Kay Stewart and Bill Proctor will take their vows October 9 at the Wee Kirk o' the Heather; Forrest Tucker is around again saying he will wed. This time it's an N. T. G. girl; Jackie Oakie cut his hand so badly on the "Tin Pan Alley" set they had to rush him to the studio doctor.

Mrs. Don Ameche has finally bobbed her hair and it's very becoming; Dixie Crosby is back in town, but Bing will play golf tournaments across the country for the British war relief; Dr. Frank Nolan denies he is wed to Helen Morgan; Randy Scott and Liz Whitney a Brown Derby twosome; dozens of autograph seekers were outside "21" waiting for Spencer Tracy, who was lunching there. You can imagine the delight of the kids when Jimmy Stewart also walked in.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Sept. 24.

Hollywood prides itself on knowing what the public wants, but sometimes I wonder if they know anything about the likes and dislikes of this vast American audience. They do a picture called "Abraham Lincoln" which was swell. It starred Raymond Massey, an Englishman. It lost half a million dollars. Critics loved it, public stayed away in droves. "Our Town" was a little gem. Public didn't go to see it.

HOPPER

Now along come a couple of guys who've never made a picture—"Lum and Abner." For three years Jack Votion tried to sell them to the studios and studios turned a deaf ear. So Votion mortgaged his ranch and produced a picture called "Dreaming Out Loud." And they're just back from their opening in the little town of Meno, Ark., where the boys were born. They were hoping they could sell out the theater, which holds 600, twice. Well, it was packed six times, with the boys making a personal appearance at each performance.

The same thing happened at Little Rock and Hot Springs — the towns went wild. They didn't have any ballyhoo, no special planes, no Hollywood stars, nor press flying from East and West. They paid their own expenses. But there's such a demand for the picture that a distributor in Memphis, Tenn., has booked it solidly in 140 theaters.

Miriam Hopkins, now playing Mrs. Leslie Carter in "The Lady With Red Hair," ain't what she used to be" and the change is all for the better, say some. No more storming off sets, or telling the director how to do a scene. Everybody's calling her "Miriam," and she even says "Yes, sir," to Director Kurt Bernhardt. Well, Miriam may have had her moments, but she's never been anything but a darling to me—I take 'em as I find 'em.

Little Ann Gillis is just one of the kindergarten, but she suggested the following casting: "Adventures in Diamonds," with Babs Hutton; "Young as You Feel," with C. Aubrey Smith; "Till We Meet Again," costarring Alice Faye and Tony Martin; "Free, Blonde and 21" demands Betty Grable; "And One Was Beautiful," with Hedy Lamarr and Wallace Beery. You're doing all right, Ann. If you keep this up the producers will be asking your aid.

Yanks Beat Nats Twice; Browns Halt Indians

New York Narrows Gap, Wins, 6-5, 7-2

Champs Gain Full Game on Tigers; Now One Behind Indians; Leonard, Krakky Bow

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Sept. 24.—Clinging desperately to their faint pennant chances, the Yankees today struck two mighty blows for themselves, winning a double-header from Washington, 6 to 5 and 7 to 2.

A faithful throng of 15,500 in Yankee Stadium saw Joe McCarthy's team score two runs against Dutch Leonard in the ninth inning to tie the first game and bat Leonard out of the box in the winning tenth. The second game, in which the Yanks knocked Joe Krakauskas off the mound with a five-run uprising in the third inning, was called at the end of the seventh because of darkness.

The Yankees gained a full game and a half on the second-place Indians and moved to within 2½ games of the league-leading Tigers.

Joe Gordon led the Yankees' assault on Leonard. He made five of the Yank's 16 hits, including three doubles, and scored the winning run after making a two-bagger in the tenth.

Leonard pitched five scoreless innings thereafter while the Nats took a 5-2 lead. They picked up a run in the third after Crosetti fumbled Leonard's grounder. The pitcher went to third on Lewis' single and scored on Walker's infield out.

Charlie Keller's infield single started the second-game assault on Krakky in the third inning. Joe DiMaggio followed with a triple against the leftfield wall, and Rosar drew a walk. Selkirk's single to right scored Rosar and then it was that Dahlgren pumped his twelfth homer of the year into the rightfield stands, producing the last three runs of the inning.

Gordon's homer drove Krakky from the box in the fourth, Carrasquel limiting the damage to one

Mrs. Betty Meckley, Mrs. Jago Capture Low Gross Cups In Play at Woodmont

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Mrs. C. P. Medley, one of the first players off the tee in Class A, of The Washington Post Cup Tournament yesterday at Woodmont, was the first to turn in a card and after watching the scoreboard for nearly four hours, her name was still on top and the big trophy will go to her home club, Indian Spring, for one year.

The new Post cup champion, a former winner for the President's plate and the Miller Memorial tournaments, played the out nine in 42, and although she came back in 48 for a 90, she won by a two-stroke margin with 90-13—77.

Mrs. Betty P. Meckley won her fifth low gross prize of the season, playing her first round since late in August. The Kenwood representative spent 10 days in the hospital since the Mason-Dixon Women's Championship in August but her golf showed no ill effects as she played one of her favorite courses, Woodmont, in 81 strokes for low gross honors.

Instructor Gets Credit

At Kenwood, in the Class B play, an innovation in The Post tournament this year, Mrs. H. Ingman Harr won the low net trophy with a score of 99-29, 70. Mrs. Harr's score was her lowest in competition since she took up the game just 2½ years ago, and was a credit to her instructor, Washington Golf and Country Club Professional Dave Thomson.

The low gross winner among the 19 to 36 handicapped players at Kenwood was Mrs. John W. Jago, of the host club, who just last week won the Kane Trophy. Mrs. Jago, who until August of 1939 had never played a round of golf, posted a 98 that won over Mrs. Harr, Mrs. L. F. Hurley and Mrs. Lloyd Dennis, who had 99s. Only four players broke 100. Mrs. Jago, who has cut nine shots off her handicap in a year, paid tribute to the teaching of her home club pro, George Diffenbaugh.

Mrs. Medley received the original Post Trophy for a year's possession while she and Mrs. Harr received sterling silver bowls and Mrs. Meckley and Mrs. Jago plates, all given by The Post. The District Women's Golf Association completed the prize list, eight other net prizes for the Class A winners and as many for the Class B players.

In the Class A play at Woodmont, Mrs. J. S. Phillips, of Army and Navy, won second low net with a pair of 46s for a 92—13—79. Mrs. Phillips took six strokes on the par

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Henry Armstrong's occasional fling at verse may have given him some sort of literary standing among men of the prize ring, but it is no poetic license that he takes when he starts punching people senseless. His murderous assaults stem from the most talented pair of fists and the greatest fund of energy that any prize fighter may ever have boasted.

POVICH

Who is going to beat the guy?

Perhaps the best answer was volunteered by Mr. Chris Dundee, manager of the hapless Phil Furr, latest victim of Armstrong's perpetual punching display. "Nobody's going to beat Armstrong. He'll beat himself. That's the only way it can happen," says Dundee.

"When Armstrong gets licked it will happen when he has lost his fine appetite for fighting," Dundee was saying. "It's what the sports writers call the zest for fighting. He'll lose that along with the easy living that always comes to long-time champions. Too much fried chicken and too many flesh wounds will stop him eventually, and a fair sort of young, hungry fighter will come along some night and beat him. But it won't be the real Armstrong in there."

In fact, says Dundee, the next guy Armstrong fights is not exactly a foredoomed failure against the champion. "Fritzie" Zivic has a chance to lick him—not much, but still a chance. They fight at the Garden on October 4 and Armstrong will have to be pretty near his peak. Anything less and the title could change hands."

We reminded Dundee that Zivic, unless memory failed us, was the same harmless-seeming young man who had gotten himself thoroughly beaten about five years ago at Portner's Arena in a bootleg fight with Johnny Jaddick, who was never more than a second-flight lightweight. Zivic must have come a long way.

"That's right," said Dundee, he has. "He grew up to be a pretty good fighter. He was just a green kid when you saw him down here. He's 24 now, and matured. He's bigger and tougher, and that's what I like about him. It will take a tough guy to beat Armstrong, and that's why I have to give Zivic a chance—at least more chance than anybody else."

Dundee repeated that it would be less than the real Armstrong who would be licked when his title changed hands. "I wouldn't give Zivic a chance except that he's just the sort of a guy who can fight Armstrong on something like his own terms. He's the only fellow I know who can fight Armstrong's fight. Zivic can maul and butt, and he's tough and smart. He'll do things to those old cuts on Armstrong's eyes. He'll take advantage of those old cuts. Zivic has a leather skin, himself. He doesn't bleed easily, and that's a great help to anybody who is fighting Armstrong."

But despite Dundee's optimism, Armstrong will doubtless deal with Zivic as the occasion demands. That's the way he fought Phil Furr, with success that was at least notable. Armstrong was slightly more than disgusted with his handlers after his fight with Furr. They had given him a wrong steer and he had anticipated a boxing match, not a slugfest with the local boy.

"They told me that he was a hitter, but of the Lew Jenkins type—that he'd stand up straight and try to box me when he wasn't punching," said Armstrong. "They must have been looking at some other fellow, not Furr. He turned out to be strictly a puncher who was willing to stand up to me. I never did go much for what told people told me about fighters. You can't depend on it. That's why I never have any set plans before a fight. I don't like those kind of surprises."

Boxer, puncher, back-pedaller, it doesn't seem to matter much to Armstrong who he's in there with. He has the happy talent of making his opponent fight his kind of fight. There isn't must alternative when the champion lays his head on a fellow's chest and keeps punching. There's no keeping away from him; not with his boundless energy.

Two rounds after the fight started, Furr was a plumb tuckered fellow who was in there punching from sheer desperation and couldn't find his corner at the end of the second round. Armstrong was simply fighting just another one of his pet kind of fights.

We liked Furr's after-the-fight statement. He said, simply, "I had to keep punching. I know I can't box, and I'm to slow to run." At least he's an honest sort.

Elden Auker Beats Indians For St. Louis

Browns Win, 7 to 2, Putting Cleveland 1½ Games Behind Detroit

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Sept. 24.—Dr. Elden Auker took Cleveland's pennant fever down a few degrees today, tossing a spell over the Indians for a 7 to 2 St. Louis victory which placed the Tribe a game and a half behind the idle Detroit Tigers.

The submarine ball hurler, whose tosses always are poison to the Indians, placed them squarely behind the eight ball in the flag chase by limiting them to six scattered hits.

1,000 on Hand

About 1,000 customers saw Auker exert his mastery over the second-placers for the fifth time in seven starts in this torrid campaign, and aid his own cause with a brace of timely singles which left Cleveland pennant hopes as gloomy as the thundercloud that muttered over Cleveland Standium all afternoon.

Only a pair of errors by Johnny Berardino, St. Louis shortstop, allowed Oscar Vitt's boys to tally at all. With two down in the third, Berardino threw low to first on Ben Chapman's grounder to allow Ray

Favorites Fall In Belmont Futurity Trial

By the Associated Press

Belmont Park, N. Y., Sept. 24.—A crowd of 8,744 watched in amazement as both Warren Wright's Whirlaway and Alfred Vanderbilt's New World went down to defeat in the 6-furlong futurity trial, an overnight dash that stole the show from the Manhattan Handicap here this murky afternoon.

Our Boots, a $3,500 yearling, owned by the Woodvale Farm, of Toledo's Royce G. Martin, scored a three-lengths victory, running down the Widener straightaway in the fast time of 1:10 3-5 to return $30.90 for $2. W. H. LaBoyteaux's Springwood was second by a head. New World, apparently eliminated right at the break when Monday Lunch wheeled in front of him and made the Vanderbilt colt stand still momentarily, was third by a length and a half over Laatokka.

Challedon to Await Maryland Season For Next Start

By the Associated Press

Belmont Park, N. Y., Sept. 24.—G. D. Cameron, trainer of Challedon, announced today after a conference with W. L. Brann, owner of the fine colt, that Challedon would not start in either the Jockey Club Gold Cup or the New York Handicap at Belmont Park.

Favorites Advance In U. S. Women's Golf

District's Mrs. Davey, in Match Play After Play-Off, Beats 1st Foe; Betty Jameson Wins by 7 and 6

By the Associated Press

Del Monte, Calif., Sept. 24.—Ball-belting Betty Jameson, San Antonio's gift to the golfing world, led a flock of favorites through first-round victories today in the National Amateur Championship for women.

Miss Jameson, shooting one over par for Pebble Beach, piled up a score of box car figures to eliminate Mrs. Lengfeld, of Los Altos, Calif., 7 and 6.

Favorites had a field day in the opening match play rounds but there was one noticeable exception. Ellamae Williams, tall sharpshooter from Medina, Ill., was sent to the sidelines by Grace Amory, of Glen Head, N. Y. The score was 2 and 1. Each had qualified by the same score, 88, but Miss Williams, as holder of the Illinois State and Chicago district titles, teed off as the more strongly-backed competitor.

Was Six Holes Up

As it was, Miss Amory rounded the first nine holes in 37, one under par, and held a six-up advantage. The match reached the stage where the Illinois player was six down and six to go. She won back four holes, then lost out on the seventeenth, which was halved.

Another unexpected reversal saw Mrs. Myron Davy, of Washington, D. C., defeat Mrs. Frank Russ, of Alameda, Calif., 1 up.

Mrs. Russ had qualified with a 79, second low medal score, whereas Mrs. Davy barely got into the title flight, winning her place in a play-off of a 93 tie with seven others this morning. Mrs. Davy scored a birdie 3 on the second hole to earn a place.

Newspaper Says A's Asked Waivers On Benny McCoy

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 24.—The Record says it has learned from "an authoritative source" that the Athletics asked waivers on Benny McCoy, $65,000 second baseman, 10 days ago.

McCoy was signed early this year as a free agent. Manager Connie Mack paid him a bonus of $45,000 to sign and in addition gave him a two-year contract at $10,000 annually. He has been erratic both in the field and at bat this season.

Salica Wins Bantam Title From Pace

New York, Sept. 25 (AP).—Lou Salica, New York, cleared up the muddled bantamweight situation tonight and became sole owner of the world's 118-pound championship by outpointing Georgie Pace of Cleveland in 15 rounds at the Bronx Coliseum. Salica weighed 117½, Pace, 118.

Outboxing the little Cleveland Negro all the way, Salica regained the crown he won in 1935 from Sixto Escobar, and lost the same year to the same fighter.

Thus, for the first time in a year, the division has only one titleholder. Escobar "abdicated" the throne a year ago and Pace was given recognition as champion by the National Boxing Association, while Salica was recognized as New York State titlist by the State Athletis Commission.

Tonight, it was a dead close fight for nine rounds, but Pace tired in the stretch and Salica came on to win. At the finish, with a partisan crowd of 4,138 cheering him on, he was barely breathing heavily.

The crowd contributed to a gross gate of $3,727.45, of which $295.11 went to a Bronx charity. The fighters each received $664.

Salica piled up most of his points with short rights to the head and body. In the ninth, one of these gashed Pace's left eye, and for the rest of the way the little New Yorker worked on that sore spot. In the twelfth, Salica drew blood from the Clevelander's nose and mouth, and in the thirteenth Pace raised a "mouse" under Lou's right eye with a hard left hook.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

(Editor's note: This is the first of a series of three articles on conscription, as it effects athletes, and a preview of the athletic programs planned for troop camps.)

The chances of a Bobby Feller being conscripted during the five-year drafting period on which the country is about to embark, are about 12-to-1. Draft officials, bombarded on all sides by questions about the exemption of prominent sports figures, regard celebrated athletes as no better or worse than other eligibles.

CONSIDINE

Unlike the World War draft, which exempted shipyard and agricultural workers, there will be no exemptions this time for able bodied men in the age ranges called. There may be postponements of their service in the armed forces, such postponements not to exceed six months, but these deferments will be considered only when the individual is an "indispensible" employe of an "indispensable" industry bearing on the "health, safety or interest" of the country. The employer of such a person will be asked to find a substitute for him as quickly as possible.

Army officers we questioned think that the celebrated World War picture of Jack Dempsey working in a shipyard with patent leather shoes was an important factor in Congress' decision to exempt no one. They point out, too, that a number of rich families bought farms during the last war and put their sons on them, in order to get them in under the agricultural exemption clause. One famous ball player showed up in France with eight suitcases of clothes.

Sports made a bad showing in the World War. Few sports figures enlisted and many employers and managers used every known device to keep their muscular chattels out of uniform. "We don't want to deprive the American citizens of their right to see a ball game when-even they please," a draft officer told us. "But we doubt if many of the local draft boards throughout the country will look upon single athletes with no dependents as being 'indispensable.' Seems to me that there are an awful lot of good substitutes sitting on ball club benches. We're hoping that the first prominent athlete whose name is drawn out of the 'fishbowl' will put down his bat or his boxing gloves, or his football, or his tennis racquet and get right off to camp. It will be a great thing for the draft if he does, for it will show that we're playing no favorites."

We inquired about the resident's appeal to employers to give conscripted men their old jobs back when they come out of the Army or Navy. This, patently, wouldn't always be possible in sport. A big league ball player who is just about through, but who is still making good money, not only could not command his old salary after a year in the service but also might not even be good enough to stay in the league.

The officer shrugged. "The President also said that we must be prepared to make sacrifices," he answered. "It has been pointed out, too, that the big leagues will now stop paying big prices for rookies, for fear that they'll be drafted before delivery. Our answer to that is that draft clauses should be included in such bills of sale. And that minor league teams which partially exist by selling players to the big leagues will be run out of business. We doubt that very much. But even if that should happen in extreme cases, it isn't very important in the grand scheme of things. It seems to us that athletes and owners of athletic teams should be concentrating a little less on how to escape conscription. France waited until a week before it was invaded to do what we're doing today."

College football players in the age range will be required to register and will be subject to call, but a clause in the momentous draft bill defers for one year the reporting date of all college students. After July 1, 1941, however, the All-Americas will be no different than the Joe Doe, the plumber's assistant, in the eyes of draft authorities.

There is no chance that big league ball players who are called will be able to take six months' service in the Army or Navy at the end of this season, report for baseball in April, then take their other six months after next season's play. The bill calls for 12 consecutive months of training. By the same token fighters will not be permitted to stagger their training period, to make it coincide with their matches. About 5,000,000 single men without dependents, who hold nonessential jobs in nonessential industries, will serve as the group from which the first 400,000 men will be selected. If a Feller or a Ted Williams, or a Billy Conn, or a Don McNeill, or a Whizzer White happens to be among them, in they go. "Good athletes are physically and mentally capable of becoming good, resourceful soldiers," one officer told us. "And we need good, resourceful soldiers."

Andy Oliveri Victim of Stunning Upset in Publinks Play

R.A. Jennings Beats Twice Champ, 3-2

Roy Smith Also Gains Final in D. C. Title Play Today At East Potomac

In the biggest public links upset in many years, Andy Oliveri, the two-time city champion and a prohibitive choice to make it three straight, bowed out in the semifinal round of the current tourney yesterday at East Potomac.

Oliveri's surprise conqueror was Richard A. Jennings, a Texan who works in the office of Senator Tom Connally, and who has been playing golf here less than two years. He won the medal in the East Potomac qualifying, moved through two rounds Monday and defeated Sparkey Dawson yesterday morning before trouncing Oliveri, 3 and 2.

Jennings opponent in the 36-hole final today will be Roy Smith, the East Potomac Spring Tournament champion, and to the winner will go the S. G. Leoffler trophy, that was signed, sealed and almost delivered to Oliveri for permanent possession.

Oliveri gave no sign of his downfall in the morning quarter-final as he defeated Ken Zent, national publinks qualifier, 6 and 5. Meanwhile, Smith won, 3 and 2, over W. W. Seay, while John Jankowski eliminated Keith Kallio by a 4-and-2 margin.

In the other semifinal afternoon match, Smith defeated Jankowski, 3 and 2, with a two-over par brand of golf.

Jennings started his hot streak on the second nine of the morning match. Out in 41 and 2 up on Dawson, he started back with three straight birdies and was back in 33, three under par.

Against Oliveri, Jennings was only one over regulation figures as the match ended on the sixteenth green. He was 37-36, 73, while Oliveri was 40-37, 77. The winner turned 3 up.

Mack to score. He booted a double play ball in the fourth to permit Hal Trosky to bring in the second run. The bases were jammed, but Frankie Pytlak popped and Harder fanned to end the threat.

The Indians set up runners on first and third with nobody out in the sixth—and this time couldn't get across even one run. Ray Mack popped to short center for the first out.

Vitt decided this was the time for some pinch hitters. Sammy Hale batted for Pytlak—and fanned. Jeff Heath substituted for Harder—and grounded weakly to second.

That removed Mel, one of Cleveland's top hurlers, and paved the way for the Browns to win in the next stanza off Eisenstat, Cleveland southpaw. They continued their barrage against Johnny Allen in the eighth and ninth and wound up with 14 bingles.

It was only a little less of a rout than the 8-and-7 win of Peggy Graham, of Hollywood, over Margaret Bushard, of Pasadena. Miss Graham, incidentally, produced the finest golf of the day. She was 2-under-par figures for the 11 holes played after turning the first nine with a 2-under 36.

The next best game was contributed by Miss Traung with 1 under par for 12 holes. Two other top-notchers, Elizabeth Hicks, of Long Beach, Calif., and Helen Seigel, of Philadelphia, each finished 1 over standard figures.

California State Champion Mrs. James Ferrie, of Pasadena, won from Mrs. Ethel Wack, Santa Barbara, Calif., 4 and 2, but she runs into stout competition tomorrow in the person of Jean Bauer, of East Providence, R. run, but in the fifth the Yankees raked the Venezuelan for two hits and three runs. He walked one run across the plate.

Walker opened the fifth with a single to left and Travis promptly scored him with a triple to the right-field corner, tying the score at 2-2. Travis scored when Myer beat out an infield hit to Crosetti.

Atley Donald was replaced by Sundra in the fifth, and the latter yielded two more runs to the Nats in the sixth. Rick Ferrell doubled to left and scored on Case's single to left. Case stole second and scored on Walker's single through the box.

Joe Gordon, whose five hits led the Yankees' attack, singled to center in the seventh and eventually scored on a single by Rolfe and Keller's long fly, cutting the Nats' lead to 5-3.

Mrs. Gale E. Pugh, vice president of the association from Manor, who presented the prizes, won fourth low net and turned the presentation over to Miss Bertha Israel, of the host club, at that point. Mrs. Pugh had 92—12—80. Jerry Weible, who tied for the Corby Cup two weeks ago, was fifth low net with 93—13—80, while the three-time president of the women's golf association, Mrs. Frank R. Keefer, of Chevy Chase, was next with 98—18—80. Mrs. Keefer was told her score was 95 and tied Mrs. Medley when she first came in, but a recount by her partner, Mrs. Meckley, totaled 98. They were already planning a play-off for the cup.

More Ties

Seventh, eighth and ninth net prizes were also ties and, in order: Mrs. C. T. Frownfelter, Beaver Dam, 96-15, 81; Mrs. Leo Walper, Capital, 85-4, 81, and Mrs. W. E. Hall, Columbia, 94-13, 81, were drawn out.

Second low net in the Class B play found Mrs. L. F. Hurley, Columbia, with 99-24, 75, the nearest to Mrs. Harr's winning 70. Mrs. Lloyd Dennis, Washington, 99-23, 76, was next. The first three players all tied with 99 gross scores but the difference was in handicaps.

Mrs. A. C. Paul, Congressional, also a familiar name in local racing circles, shot the first 100 score of her career and with minus a 22 handicap won fourth low net with 100—22—78. Mrs. F. L. Williams, Argyle, with 103—25—78, won in a draw with Mrs. R. Thornberg, Kenwood, 102—24—78.

Mrs. V. G. Myers, Kenwood, 101—22—79, and Mrs. J. P. Brantley, Manor, 105—26—79, completed the prize list among the Class B players.

Makes Debut

Mrs. Harr, making her debut as a major prize winner in the association tournaments, got the biggest thrill out of her round with a birdie four on the par five fifth hole at Kenwood, dropping a 25-foot putt.

Mrs. Medley started well, as she won the major trophy at Woodmont, playing the first nine in 42, including a 20-foot putt on the fourth hole. She started back with a regulation par on the first hole, a four, but then ran into a pair of sevens that nearly cost her the cup. She got mixed up in some honeysuckle on the second hole, and on the next just missed shots from tee to green. The next six holes were all fives, including the par threes. On the seventeenth the new champion, who succeeds Mrs. F. Dickinson Letts, of Chevy Chase, trapped her drive, took three to get out, but rallied nicely by dropping a tricky 4-footer.

Red Sox Slug Macks Twice, 16-8 and 4-3

Foxx Hits 500th Homer; Consecutive Circuit Mark Tied

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 24.—Jimmy Foxx hit his 500th homer of his career today as the Boston Red Sox clouted three round-trippers in succession to tie a major league record in beating the Athletics in both ends of a twin bill, 16 to 8 and 4 to 3.

The three homers in a row came in the sixth of the opener against George Caster. Ted Williams, Foxx and Joe Cronin slammed the ball out of the lot. Bobby Doerr then poked a mighty triple and was stopped at third, although observers thought he could have got safely home. Jim Tabor followed with the fourth round-trippper of the inning, one less than the major league mark set by the New York Giants June 6, 1939.

Altogether the Sox got six homers, three triples, five two-baggers and nine singles in the opener.

The A's led in the second game until the eighth when the Sox got three runs on singles by Foxx and doubles by Cronin and Doerr.

Ackerman On Fishing

Ocean City Fishing Boat Heads North To Seek School Tuna

The Ocean City marlin fisherman Lev-Lou, skippered by Capt. Lev Raymond, has gone North for the tuna fishing off the North Jersey Coast, in spite of the fact that the great majority of boats head south at this time of the year.

School tuna are Lev's particular choice of a game fish, and because they are, probably the reason for his good luck in taking them. Anyway, he has dropped right into some good fishing at Manasquan.

ACKERMAN

Flat seas have made easy going and good catches for the chummers, not only at Manasquan, but at Freeport and Bay Shore on the Long Island shore, where the boats have been taking up to eight and ten daily, weighing up to 150 pounds.

Lev reports also good catches of school tuna, weighing from 30 to 40 pounds, and broadbill still present far offshore. We hasten to add, offshore to him is 50 or 60 miles.

The Townsend Award, given each year by Paul and Jack Townsend, with $100 in cash, to the Ocean City marlin fisherman tagging and releasing the greatest number of white marlin, goes to Capt. Crawford Savage.

Out of a total of nine caught, he tagged and released five, which is really a creditable performance, and indicates there will really be a chance in coming years to learn something about white marlin migrations with such cooperation.

Capt. "Red" Hall was runner-up with four releases, and Capt. Jack Stevens, third, with three. Hardly any comparison to last year, considering one charter boatmen alone released 32; but it must also be noted that this year's total caught was only 151, against 1,343 for 1939. Other fish tagged and released bring the total for this season up to 17, while 82 were given their liberty last year with Bureau of Fisheries markers on their bills or in their pectoral fins.

Getting down to actual figures the releases were .0618 per cent in 1939 and .112 per cent in 1940. The average of the releases being almost doubled even though the total caught was but a ninth of the previous year.

The judges awarding the two Tycoon rods to the sportsman tagging and releasing the greatest number of white marlin this season for Frank M. O'Brien, the Miami manufacturer, are having troubles of their own. Mrs. Lee Fisher, of Baltimore, catching and releasing a fish on September 14, tied Mrs. C. L. Parker, of Washington, for the ladies rod. While the charter-boatman's cash award could be split in case of a tie, an $80 Tycoon rod can't.

Dodger Spree In 5th Beats Giants, 5-4

2d Place Deadlock Clinched by Flock As Wyatt Triumphs

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Sept. 24.—The Brooklyn Dodgers clinched at least a tie for second place in the National League today with one big five-run splurge in the fifth inning that was good enough to beat the New York Giants, 5 to 4.

It was the sixteenth triumph of the Dodgers over their cross-town rivals this year and the Giants' sixteenth defeat in 19 games. Whitlow Wyatt got credit for his fifteenth victory out of the affair, hitting a single with the bases loaded to spark the big Dodger rally. But he had to be rescued in the eighth when the Giants scored all their runs on six hits, one of them a triple by Johnny Rucker with two on.

The victory gave Brooklyn an 87-62 record with five games to play. The third place St. Louis Cardinals, rained out today, have a 79-67 standing with eight to go.

C. U. Sophomore, Injured in Scrimmage, Sent to Hospital

Reserve Back Hurt Hitting Terp Runner

Francis Brosnihan's Knee Badly Injured; G. W. Announces Probable Line-up

By Jack Munhall

George Washington yesterday named a probable starting line-up for its Friday night football inaugural with Mount St. Mary's at Griffith Stadium while out at College Park a Catholic University sophomore was painfully injured in scrimmage with Maryland.

The player hurt was Francis Brosnihan, promising Cardinal reserve halfback, who was treated at Providence Hospital for severely torn ligaments in his leg. The Worchester, Mass., youngster was knocked to the ground, his leg pinned beneath him, when he attempted to tackle Maryland Halfback Don Shockey, an extremely powerful runner.

At Providence Dr. Eugene Finegan said the Cardinal back probably would be hospitalized for "several weeks." The injury was described as a possible fracture or badly torn ligaments. X-ray pictures this morning will reveal the extent of the injury, Dr. Finegan said.

Starters Seasoned

It will be a well-seasoned eleven that starts for George Washington against Bull Draper's Mounts Friday, according to the probable G. W. regular line-up announced by Coach Bill Reinhart. Only two sophomores are among the starters.

The backfield likely will be the same that finished the 1939 season for George Washington, with Sam Babich, a converted end at quarterback; Murphy Booth and Tom Grady at halves, and Walter Fedora at fullback.

Along the line will be Frank August and Johnny Picco at ends; Tim Swett and Ed Robins at tackles; Mike Monchlovich at center, and Koko Kokoski and Henry Agusiewicz at guards. Robins and Agusiewicz are the probable sophomore starters, though Robins, as well as Swett, will be in the line-up only if the regular tackles, Tony Barauskas and Dan Snyder, are not recovered from illnesses.

Barauskas is slowly recuperating from a recurrence of an attack of bronchitis that made him late in reporting for fall practice, while Snyder is troubled by an upset stomach.

Though Grady is listed in the probable starting line-up it is by no means certain that he will open the game, Reinhart pointed out, since the tailback position is still a three-cornered battle among Grady, Ken Batson and Ed Wiliamoski. Both Batson and Wiliamoski have been particularly impressive of late.

Coaches Satisfied

The injury to Brosnihan alone marred the C. U.-Maryland scrimmage as rival coaches afterwards expressed satisfaction with the showings of their squads.

Catholic University scored two touchdowns to one for Maryland, but the two teams were about equal in yardage gained by ground and by air. The Terrapins displayed marked improvement over all previous scrimmages, especially on defense as attested by their goal-line stand. Maryland's line held the hard-running Cardinal backs for three downs from the 3-yard line before Charley Moutenot cracked over for the second C. U. touchdown.

Earlier the same Moutenot had accounted for the opening points of the scrimmage when he pitched a neat 30-yard pass to Quarterback Pete Sachon after the Cardinals had obtained possession of the ball on the Maryland 40 after a pass interception.

Score Came Late

Maryland tallied just before play was terminated on a 70-yard sustained drive, climaxed by a short pass, Elmer Rigby to Fred Widener. The big blow of the advance was another Rigby-thrown aerial which landed in Don Shockey's arms for a 35-yard gain.

Man of the Month

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

By Arch McDonald

Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

Cecil Travis was the outstanding performer for the Nats at Yankee Stadium in the double-header yesterday and thus drawn down the chief award of Man of the Month points.

Buddy Lewis	56	Jimmy Pofahl	21
Dutch Leonard	47	Joe Krakauskas	18
Sid Hudson	42	Rick Ferrell	12
Ken Chase	39	Jake Early	11

Dempsey, Kearns Together Again

New York, Sept. 24.—Jack Dempsey will team up with Jack Kearns again on Thursday night, when he will referee the Max Baer-Pat Comiskey fight which Kearns is promoting at Jersey City.

Dempsey was selected to referee the 15-rounder on Kearns' insistence, Abe J. Greene, chairman of the New Jersey Boxing Commission announced tonight. Rigid rules against outsiders refereeing in New Jersey were waived.

Kearns will have another of his former fighters—Mickey Walker—handling one of the preliminaries. Kearns managed Walker, welter and middleweight champion in his day, after cutting loose from Dempsey just before the latter lost the heavyweight title to Gene Tunney in 1926.

Minnesota Captain Moves Back to Center

Minneapolis, Sept. 24 (AP).—Bob Bjorklund, Minnesota cocaptain and regular center in 1939, was moved back to his old job for a brief period today after spending most of the season to date at end. It was problematical, however, whether he would start against Washington since he was nursing a charlie horse.

Montana State Faces 3d Foe in 6 Days

Butte, Mont., Sept. 24 (INS).—Montana State's Bobcats, their claws dulled by a 34-to-0 defeat handed them by San Jose State last night, today prepared for their third football game in six days.

The Bobcats, victorious over Colorado Western State, 10 to 0, last Saturday night, play Drake University at Des Moines Friday night.

Three Teams In 6-Day Bike Race Lead

The surviving field of eight teams in the six-day bicycle grind at Riverside Stadium late last night set the fastest pace of the event despite memories of an afternoon crash that sent two contestants to the hospital and resulted in the disqualification of one.

At 1 a. m., after the field had covered the amazing total of 44 miles during the preceding hour, three teams were deadlocked for the lead, and three others were only one lap off the pace in a general tightening of the race.

The tri-pace-setters were Heinz Vopel and Jules Audy, Bill (Torchy) Peden and Cesar Moretti, and Alfred Letourner and Angelo DeBacco with 917 miles and seven laps to their credit. One lap behind were Gustav Kilian and Willian Anderson, Gerard DeBaets and Archie Bollaert and George Shipman and Fred Ottevaere.

At 5:20 p. m. yesterday afternoon, the largest crowd of the race was shocked by the worst six-day crash of the year when Mel Melchori, a New York youngster riding his first race, caused a collision that sent him and two other contestants hurtling over the guard rail into the aisle. Melchori was thrown 30 feet.

Melchori, after being banished from the race for "a deliberate foul" by Referee Bill Mulvey, was removed to Emergency Hospital, where he was treated for abrasions of the arms and legs and released.

About 9 o'clock in the evening, however, Melchori and Bergna were both taken to Emergency Hospital for observation. Melchori was again released, but Bergna was retained by doctors, who said he suffered from a possible fracture of the left wrist, possible concussion of the brain and abrasion of the arms and legs.

First Regatta Speedboat Arrives Here

My Sin, With Owner Simmons in Charge, Ready for Big Test

My Sin, the powerful speed boat, and its owner-pilot, "Zamie" Simmons, reached town yesterday and the Greenwich, Conn., broker prepared to test her for the President's Cup Regatta scheduled Friday, Saturday and Sunday over the Potomac.

In tow with Simmons was his strapping mechanic, Stanley Sergeant, who brought the tidings that My Sin did 100 miles per hour in a trial spin recently in Northern waters.

Simmons registered at Regatta headquarters at the Willard Hotel, where he was warmly received by Regatta officials. And Simmons lost little time in dashing off to give his boat, hauled here in a specially constructed truck, the once over.

"She came through without a scratch," Simmons stated as the covering was removed from My Sin, 1939 Gold Cup winner and most serious challenger for the President's Cup won last season by Canada's Harold Wilson.

Simmons will decide early this morning whether she will take to the waters—and what time. If My Sin is dropped into the channel somewhere between 7 and 8 a. m., she may remain there until late this afternoon, it was said.

"You've got a fine lineup for the President's Cup race," the bespectacled Greenwich broker said. "And, while I'd like to win the race—I think this Cantrell, I mean Wild Bill Cantrell, of Louisville, is the guy to watch. He's reckless, and, that boat of his, Why Worry, is plenty speedy."

Cantrell will be one of four more President's Cup pilots due in town today with their boats. Others are George Davies' Hermes IV, from Cincinnati; J. S. Brown's King Staten, from Louisville and Marion Cooper's Mercury, from Louisville. Expected here tomorrow morning is Horace Dodge's Miss Syndicate.

Guy Lombardo, leader of the Royal Canadians, spoke long distance with Andy Duffy, vice chairman of outboards yesterday, and said his Tempo III, entered in the 225-cubic inch hydroplane races, would arrive this morning. Lombardo and his wife are to fly here, arriving Friday at 12:10, with Saturday and Sunday devoted to outboard and inboard races.

Water Ski Specialist in Action

Chuck Sligh, who will entertain President's Cup Regatta fans in an exhibition this week-end, removes his water ski while moving at 35 miles per hour. It's quite a stunt, if you know how

Hillow Rollers Win Honors In Georgetown

Fred McAleer Paces League With High Game Of 170; Callan Shines

With Fred McAleer, Hillow's Cafe, chopping down the pins with a high game of 170, the Georgetown Commercial League rolled its second session last night at Georgetown Recreation. Joe Callan, Sam's Men's Shop, came within one pin of a 400 set to help his team win high-game honors of 642. McAleer's high game of 170 paced the Hillow's quintet to a high team set of 1836. Sam's Men's Shop is on top of this 12-team league with six straight wins. Kenny Beck is official scorer.

The Takoma Electrical League had its third session at Takoma Recreation Center with Holland, Redmon & Brown, rolling a high game of 161, and Davis, Cameo Furniture, taking individual high set for the night with 407. The Atlantic Electric quintet bowled 587 and 1,670 to garner all team honors and sweep Western Electric aside in three straight. Cameo Furniture took the odd game from Fluorescent Planned Lighting to stay in first place with eight wins to but one loss. Ted Scanlan is assistant scorer for the league.

The Elko (Elks) Ladies' Duckpin League bowled its second session at New Recreation with six teams on the mapleways. Sue Lewis, Jaybirds, had a high individual game of 110 while Charlotte Skinner, Cardinals, took high set with 291. The Eagles rolled high team game of 429 while the Cards had 1201 for high team set. Mrs. Sally Pearce is official scorer.

Robespierre Springs Upset in Belair Purse at the 'Graw

Favored Early Morn Poor Third; Wagner Rides 4-Year-Old Into Winner's Circle

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 24.—W. E. Johnson's Robespierre, away from the winner's circle since early summer, developed a stretch rush today that carried him to a thrilling nose victory over Mrs. E. C. Eastwood's Challamore in the Belair purse, feature of the Tuesday action at this point. The Tall Trees Stable's Early Morn was third, beaten a half length, much to the disgust of the portion of the crowd that installed him an odds-on favorite.

Jockey Joe Wagner furthered his claim to the riding championship of the meeting by riding his tenth winner in the saddle of the 4-year-old son of Sir Andrew and Assignat. With Early Morn supposed to be "something good to eat" in the betting, Robespierre had only a scattered backing and paid a substantial $16.50 mutuel.

Early Morn, which was beaten a nose by Bill Farnsworth in time of 1:11 1-5 here on opening day, was held safe today in time of 1:12 1-5. Apprentice Jockey J. Borup was credited in most circles with messing up the effort of the favorite. He was off poorly, got through on the rail but seemed to be zigging when Borup was zagging in the stretch run.

The program began with a favorite victory. Autumnquest, racing for Mrs. H. S. Horkheimer, galloped off with the first event and paid $3.20. Swami and Wayriel followed the leader to the wire. R. McDonald did the winning riding. There was a $24.50 mutuel in the daily double when Charlene, an invader from New York, galloped off with the decision. In Memory, the public choice, was second and Dorothy Pomp was third in the field of a dozen.

Bankers' Unit Urges 'All Out' Arms Program

Modern Wars Are Won Or Lost in Preparation Speed, Delegates Told

By the Associated Press

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 24.—Arms expenditures increased 28 times faster in the first eight months of 1917 than in the same period of 1940, the economic policy commission of the American Bankers Association said today, in urging an "all-out" effort to rush defense measures.

The report of the commission, headed by Col. Leonard P. Ayers, Cleveland banker and economist, was made to 4,000 bankers from all over the country, assembled for the second day of the association's sixty-sixth convention.

"Modern wars," the report said, "are won or lost in the periods of preparations for them.

Capacity Speed Urged

"We should be pushing (the defense program) forward to accomplishment just as rapidly as our military, naval and industrial resources will permit.

"So far in 1940 we have not been getting on with the task of rearmament as rapidly as our potential productive capacities should have made possible.

"The disturbing fact is that with respect to the progress of our military effort we have not been moving forward nearly as rapidly in 1940 as we did back in 1917."

1917 Records Cited

The report cited some of the production records of 1917, including:

Launching of the destroyer Ward in 18 days and completion in 30 days. Present production schedules are about 2 years.

The feat of the Crane Co, Chicago valve manufacturers, in producing 4-inch trench mortars 30 days after the first order was received.

"No such impressive records are being made in our present effort for preparedness," the report said.

"No one expects them, and no one even discusses their possibility.

"Your economic policy commission holds that the true purpose of our present program for preparedness is to avoid and avert the possibility of our having to wage war later on. It also holds that the likelihood of our being able to escape participation in the present world conflict may well depend on the vigor and efficiency of our present preparations."

Soviet Shipment Increases Week's Imports of Gold

By the Associated Press

A large Russian shipment helped boost gold imports in the week ended September 16 to $107,349,191.

In the preceding week, the Commerce Department said, imports had amounted to $72,430,633.

The Russian shipment totaled $11,175,000, and was the first direct movement of gold from the Soviet Union to the United States since a so-called "mystery" shipment of $5,000,000 several months ago. Other large shipments were $56,988,285 from Canada, a major source of United States gold imports for many months; $6,598,355 from Portugal, $2,589,904 from Curacao, $4,738,540 from Argentina, $6,377,324 from the Netherlands East Indies, $3,088,884 from Japan, and $14,604,827 from Australia.

Southern Railway Places Big Freight Car Order

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 24 (AP).—The Southern Railway placed an order with the Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing Co. plant, at Bessemer today for 1,500 all-steel boxcars, estimated to cost approximately $3,700,000.

The order, largest of the year for the Bessemer plant, will require approximately 30,000 tons of steel.

London Stocks

London, Sept. 24 (AP).—Stocks in the gilt-edge section closed generally ¼ higher today in a market notable for absence of selling pressure. Kaffirs were quiet in late dealings but local buying brought further improvement in dividend payers. Among the industrials, iron, steel and store shares advanced in an otherwise quiet market. Oil shares were firmer in spots on an increase in the price of gasoline but copper and rubber stocks were without particular interest.

Home Loans Expand 17.5% In Fiscal Year

Savings-Loan Units Show Advance of $295,968,000

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Thrift and home financing services provided for communities by insured savings and loan associations are expanding, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board reports, stating home mortgage loans on books of 2,061 insured associations increased 17.5 per cent during the fiscal year, 1940.

A study of these identical associations also was made in the preceding fiscal year and on June 30, 1940, first mortgages held by the associations amounted to $1,986,418,000 as compared with $1,687,450,000 at the close of the fiscal year 1939, a gain of $295,968,000.

During the same period private savings of the public in these institutions increased 19 per cent, from $1,578,953,000, to $1,878,317,000, a rise of $299,364,000. Private investors gained in number from 2,136,094 to 2,428,017, or 291,923, equal to 13.7 per cent.

The study by the board's economists revealed that the associations had reduced the amount of real estate owned by 18.5 per cent and the amount of Government investments by 9 per cent. The real estate represented property taken in through foreclosure, while the Government investments were made in the associations at their own request by Federal agencies during the emergency of the depression and which the associations are repaying much faster than required by the Government.

Assets of the associations rose 13 per cent, from $2,221,741,000 to $2,512,969,000. Reserves were up 9.3 per cent.

Farm Income Dip Forecast In 4 Months

Halt in Upward Trend Foreseen for Balance of Year

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department said yesterday farmers' cash income probably would not run ahead of last year's for the rest of this year, as it had in the eight months through August.

In announcing that 1940 receipts, including Government payments, approximated $5,270,000,000 so far and were 8 per cent higher than a year earlier, the department said income during the last four months was not expected to be any larger and might be smaller than in the same period of 1939.

The department said the trend of income during the rest of the year would be influenced to some extent by the movement of feeder cattle and lambs into feed lots rather than marketing them.

Farm marketing receipts in August were reported tentatively at $738,000,000 against a revised figure of $708,000,000 in July and $717,000,000 in August, 1939.

The figure for this August included $30,000,000 from crops, $396,000,000 from livestock and livestock products, and $42,000,000 from Government subsidies.

Income from crops was down $8,000,000, compared with August, 1939. While livestock income was up $29,000,000 although it was a decline from July to August of this year instead of the usual seasonal increase. Government payments were the same.

New York Dry Goods

New York, Sept. 24 (AP).—DRY GOODS: Inquiry was good for print and broadcloth constructions, with a fair volume of business transacted. Traders look for further buying of textiles should the stock market continue firm. Rayon prices were easy as principal transactions took place in spot delivery material. The woolen goods section is faced with shortages in some popular men's fabrics, notably coverts. Scattered sales were made in silk underwear fabrics, and linings show a seasonal increase.

Nation's Lead In Size Held By Perpetual

Nine Other Building Institutions Here Are U. S. Leaders

The Perpetual Building Association continues to lead savings and loan associations of the Nation with total resources of $51,358,220, according to latest figures. In second place is the Federal Savings of New York with resources of $37,417,876.

Morton Bodfish, executive vice president of the United States Savings and Loan League, was the principal speaker at the monthly meeting of the building and loan groups of Washington yesterday at the Raleigh Hotel. Bodfish complimented the Washington associations on their progress and pointed out that no other city in the country has as many institutions boasting of $5,000,000 resources and over as does the Capital. According to latest figures available, ten local institutions have balance sheets in excess of five million assets, with New York City a close second with eight.

Bodfish revealed that in point of size the other local associations come in the following order: In twenty-first place, American Building; thirty-second place, National Permanent; thirty-eighth place, Washington Permanent; fifty-fifth place, Equitable Co-operative; sixty-third place, First Federal Savings; eighty-second place, Oriental; ninety-seventh place, Metropolis; 103d place, Northern Liberty, and in 122d place, Columbia Federal Savings.

William N. Payne, jr., president, announced that the regular annual election of officers and directors will take place at the October meeting slated for September 29. A nominating committee consisting of R. W. Santelmann, Carl J. Bergmann, S. S. Symons and E. J. Carlson was appointed to present an official slate. Payne stated that the meeting will be a dinner at the Raleigh.

Stocks React Fractionally After Eight Days Of Advance; Optimism Prevails on Wall Street

New York, Sept. 24.—The stock market, after eight consecutive days of advance, paused to take a look around today and the result was slightly lower prices. The decline in the composite average was negligible, amounting to only 0.06 point, and trading diminished somewhat on the decline, amounting to 710,510 shares.

Price changes in the vast majority of active leaders were fractional, which means that a good portion of the gains of from one to three points made on Monday were maintained. A few inactive preferred issues, which had not been taken in hand in the roundup of last week, were brought forward and showed gains of two and three points. Their strength, however, was more in recognition of what they had missed in the last few days rather than a reflection of bullish sentiment today. Optimism was still present, but after eight days of advancing prices a resting period and an irregular decline was quite in order.

Higher prices for nonferrous metals estimates that last week's car loadings will set a new record for the year and the estimate by Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of General Motors, that 1941 automobile output will exceed that of 1940 by at least 10 per cent were a few of the straws in the wind which indicated that business at the moment is booming ahead.

Indications all point to a good final quarter, at least as far as activity is concerned. There is more doubt as to the amount of profit which companies will be able to show as a result, due to the confusion over the new tax legislation.

Banking figures today contributed to the evidence of the quickened pace in industry. Commercial, industrial and agricultural loans of reporting member reserve banks increased $8,000,000 in New York City. There was no gain in other districts, however.

Activity in today's trading centered around the old line leaders. United States Steel was the day's most active stock and sold off ¾ after its good advance of Monday. Bethlehem was down 1⅝. New York Central led the rails and was off a half point. General Motors was well supported, but Chrysler gave up a major fraction.

Aviations were generally neglected, only one member of this department, Curtiss Wright, being included in the list of the 15 most active stocks. DuPont lost 1⅝ of its recent advance and Union Carbide was down a point. Commonwealth & Southern's report for August, showing a good improvement in gross, contributed to a gain of a point in the preferred of this company.

Turnover of $7,990,000 in listed bonds represented a fairly active market today, with the tone good in most departments. Speculative rail bonds contnued to reflect modest inquiry, and the importance of that group gave the entire market a good appearance. United States Treasury bonds were fractionally higher.

New $737,000,000 Treasury Notes Bear 1½% Rate

By the Associated Press

Secretary Morgenthau announced last night that the Treasury was issuing the "cheapest" long-term bonds in its history today in exchange for $737,000,000 of notes coming due December 15.

He said holders of the maturing notes, bearing 1½ per cent interest, would be offered equivalent amounts of new bonds to bear 2 per cent interest and to mature in from 12¾ to 14¾ years.

He explained that although the Treasury frequently has borrowed money for less than 2 per cent, it had never been able to issue such long-term bonds at that rate. About a year ago, 2 per cent bonds were issued but they matured in from 9 to 11 years.

The new issue will not be offered to the general public, but will be available only to holders of the old notes who want to accept the exchange. Any note holders declining the exchange, will receive cash payment on December 15.

American Tobacco Will Reimburse Drafted Workers

New York, Sept. 24 (AP).—The board of directors of the American Tobacco Co. voted today to pay its employes who volunteer or are called for a year's active military service the difference between their regular earnings—up to $3,500 annually—and their training service pay.

George W. Hill, president of the company, said, "it is our feeling that the man who volunteers or who is called from his job to be trained for the defense of his country should be given every encouragement and assistance."

Yesterday at Wilmington, Del., the executive committe of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., voted to grant two months wages to employes inducted into service provided they had been with the company one or more years.

Chicago Livestock

Chicago, Sept. 24 (AP).—A decline of 15@25 cents today brought top hog values to the lowest levels since the end of July. Cattle were generally steady and spring lambs steady to strong.

Best wholesale pork loins today were 18.00 per hundredweight, a drop of 7.00 since the end of August.

Copper Jumps To 12 Cents; Buying Heavy

Demand Reported Running Ahead of Visible Supplies

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 24.—Domestic copper followed the upward trend of its sister munitions metals—lead and zinc—with a jump of ½ cent a pound to a price of 12 cents today.

Quotations on the other two metals were boosted yesterday: Lead by 1/10 cent a pound and zinc by 4/10 cent.

In all three cases, said trade sources, demand has been running ahead of visible supplies for the last several days. Domestic copper products instituted the new level when they were forced, in some cases, to limit offerings.

However, Japanese interests were able to obtain export copper at 9.56 cents a pound, alongside ship in New York, and it was said Japan bought 3,000 to 4,000 tons here yesterday at 9.77½ cents a pound. (Foreign copper brought into the United States for domestic use is assessed a duty of 4 cents a pound.)

Lead and zinc demand continued to exceed supplies. The price on the former was strong at 5 to 5.05 cents a pound delivered in New York and 4.85 cents in St. Louis. The zinc price also was strong at 7.25 cents a pound, East St. Louis.

SHE TRAVELS LIGHT

Be wise. Look over your wardrobe right now. Pick out the clothes that need to be put in condition for Fall, call our driver to pick them up. Prompt service assured. Let us also suggest you have summer clothes cleaned, too, before putting away. Formal attire is slightly higher.

Listen! with Glynn

The road to fame is a hard one all right. But in some cases (and this hurts us to relate) things seem to be just as hard after fame has been reached.

Take Glenn Miller and the members of his orchestra whom you've been hearing over WJSV three nights a week for the past year or so and who are arriving in town Friday for some personal appearances.

Well, before the orchestra started reaching the top in the popularity polls, the boys used to have time for a hand of pinochle once in a while or an afternoon off out at a beach or something—maybe even several nights off. But, now that they've clicked, what happens? They get no time off at all—and they wear out their trousers on bus seats.

Jitterbugs of the college and common garden variety, it seems, like to see as well as hear their heroes. And so, perforce, the Miller outfit has been on what amounts to a never-ending tour for the past year or so. In addition to its previous trips to Washington, the band has been playing one night stands throughout New York and Pennsylvania. Its been to V. M. I. and the University of Virginia. Its taken frequent tours to Boston and Providence. It was in Chicago for 19 days. It has been at William and Mary, the Naval Academy, Atlantic City, Baltimore, Grand Rapids, Detroit—and well, you think of a town—within the past several weeks.

We're not insinuating that fame doesn't pay, mind you. We merely wish to point out in kindly fashion that maybe we're just as well off not being famous.

The Post Radio Time Table

3:30 p. m., WJSV, WMAL and WOL—President Roosevelt speaks over the three great networks as he dedicates the new Washington airport at Gravelly Point.

6:15, WJSV—Lanny Ross sings the Nation's collegians, campus-bound from Maine to California.

7, WMAL—After successfully holding their own for nine weeks on the Quiz Kids front line, Gerard Darrow, 8, and Van Dyke Tiers, 13, were eliminated late last month. Now they have another shot at the knee-high Information Please and here's one listener who hopes they both get back on the board. It may keep us from hearing more new kids, but we've gotten quite fond of Gerard and Van.

9:30, WJSV—Who's the oldest man in River's End? Two 93-year olds confront Dr. Christian with problem in diplomacy.

8, WJSV—They're bidding a musical adieu to Kenny Baker, tho' it's a problem why. He'll be back next week when Fred Allen takes over the half-hour—playing opposite Eddie Cantor, who is holding Fred's old N. B. C. time. Seems Kenny's going out to the coast and farewells, though brief, are always excuse for festivities.

9, WRC—Shudder, Shudder: Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi and Peter Lorre, those the screen frights, look in on Kay Kyser's Kollege of Musical Knowledge.

3d-Term Funds Asked of Agriculture Aides

A letter soliciting funds "for the security of your very own fireside" has been mailed to a large number of employes in the Department of Agriculture by the National Committee for Agriculture, an organization "working for the preservation of the national farm program" and "supporting the election of President Roosevelt and Henry Wallace."

Distribution of the letter was revealed to The Post last night by a group of employes in the Farm Credit Administration whose spokesman protested that, apparently "the Administration has chosen to conduct a shake-down of Government workers for the benefit of its campaign chest."

The letter was signed by Eugene B. Casey as secretary-treasurer of the committee. Casey, a dairy farmer, living near Gaithersburg, Md., resigned early in July as special assistant to Albert G. Black, governor of the Farm Credit Administration, to take a part in the Presidential election campaign. In 1938 he was identified with the New Deal's attempted "purge" of Senator Millard Tydings as Montgomery County campaign manager for Tyding's primary opponent, former Representative David J. Lewis.

Informed of the letter Paul H. Appleby, Undersecretary of Agriculture, could not agree that the letter constituted a "shake-down" attempt. He said he believed the great majority of department employes would find no implied threat to their jobs in the letter's reference to "your very own fireside."

Employes of the department, he declared, have received letters from Republicans that "were far more objectionable." The Republicans, he pointed out, have characterized the Administration's farm program as a threat to individual security. He added that he could "see no reason why the Democrats should not raise a counter claim" and that he felt their "argument has some validity."

He described the committee's letter as "nothing unusual" and "commonplace," and stated it was his "impression" that there had been no violation of the Hatch Act.

The fact that Casey no longer is employed by the Government and that the letter was mailed to employes at their residences rather than at their offices complied with provisions of the act, in the opinion of Senator Carl A. Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, its author.

After setting forth the committee's aim as "preservation" of the "national farm program," declaring its support of the Democratic ticket and acclaiming the success of the President's agriculture policies, the letter declared:

"The paramount issue is saving, preserving and perpetuating freedom for ourselves and our children. This Administration, guided by President Roosevelt, is engaged in a titanic struggle for the protection of the hemisphere and all our people.

"For reasons evident to you every day, the ordinary channels of information to the public have been closed. Other and more expensive means of getting the farmer's story to the public must be found.

"Knowing your direct interest in the farmer and your close relationship to agriculture, I am asking you to make a generous money contribution to the support of this cause. If agriculture is to keep its rightful place in the sun, farmers and their friends must unite for speedy and direct action.

"Won't you help provide the funds for the security of your very own fireside? I am sure you will. Your immediate reply will be appreciated."

Inclosed with the letter was a card to accompany contributions which were directed to be sent Casey at committee offices in Chicago. The card stated funds would be used by the committee "in the interest of the farmer and for the campaign to re-elect President Franklin D. Roosevelt and to elect Henry A. Wallace."

First reports of receipt of the letter came from employes of the Farm Credit Administration and the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, but later it was learned that it had been distributed through the Agriculture Department generally. As nearly as could be determined, the mailing list was limited to employes with salaries above $3,200, approximately. In this class are both employes whose appointments were made through patronage and those whose positions are protected by the civil service.

The reaction of employes in one section of a department agency was demonstrated by the conduct of an employe who, imitating an agency official, went about his office making imaginary notes on a pad that had been ruled into columns bearing the headings:

Neither Black nor one of the two deputy FCA governors was available for comment. Deputy Governor W. H. Drosie said the letter had not come to his attention. He arranged for a copy of the text "for study."

Gasoline Output Hits Year's High

New York, Sept. 24 (AP).—Gasoline production expanded sharply last week to the highest level of the year, the weekly report of the American Petroleum Institute showed today.

Production totaled 12,135,000 barrels compared with 11,724,000 the previous week. As a result of the increase, stocks of gasoline showed a smaller decline than usual, dropping to 82,960,000 barrels at the end of the week, compared with 83,300,000 barrels a week earlier. A year ago stocks totaled 71,395,000 barrels. Daily average crude oil production decreased 26,350 barrels during the week, due entirely to a cut in California's output. Production averaged 3,621,050 barrels a day, against 3,681,050 a year ago.
